SPRAYING POTATOES

Experiment Station Workers Find It More Effective Than Dusting.

The use of liquid sprays to control insect pests and disease of potatoes is believed to be more efficient than dusts by the specialists at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva in light of experiments made on the Station grounds during the past four years. Early and late blight and tipburn were controlled more effectively by the spray than by the dust preparations, and the appearance of the foliage and the yield of marketable tubers were both more favorably affected by spraying than by dusting.

Spraying was done with 1 1/2 quarts of bordeaux and dusting with Sanders' copper-lime dust. Both materials were applied very thoroly and every effort was made to give the two methods of treatment a fair trial. In all four years, however, it was clearly evident that the spray afforded decidedly better protection against blight and tipburn than did the dust, even tho the amount of dust used was much greater than that recommended by the manufacturers and even tho the dust was used twice as often as the spray.

Dusting did give some protection in the Station tests, however, and the Station workers state that dusting may have a definite place to fill in potato growing, particularly where the area to be treated is small, that is one acre or less. Also dusts may be more economical to use where water is not readily available for making up spray solutions.

BROKEN TOMATOES GOOD AS RELISH

Make Fine Ketchup, Paste or Butter and Can be Used Just as Well as Perfect Fruit.

Small, imperfect or crushed and broken tomatoes and the juice left from canning are good material for tomato relishes such as ketchup and tomato-and-apple butter. The no fruit that is a bit spoiled should be used, ripe fresh tomatoes, of a size or condition unsuitable for canning may be preserved this way, says the state college of home economics at Ithaca.

For tomato ketchup, to every gallon of tomatoes add three red peppers and two medium sized onions. Cook them thoroly without adding any water. Put the mixture thru a strainer and measure the pulp.

For each gallon of pulp use two tablespoonfuls of salt, one-third of a cup of sugar, two teaspoonfuls each of celery salt and ground mustard, and one tablespoonful each of whole allspice, cloves and cinnamon, and one teaspoonful of paprika, and one pint of vinegar.

Tie the whole spices loosely in a bag during the cooking and remove the bag before putting the ketchup into jars. Cook all the ingredients except the vinegar with the tomato pulp for one hour. Add the vinegar and cook the mixture until it is thick. Seal it in hot, clean bottles or jars. The ketchup should have a bright red color. This is spoiled if ground spices are used, as these darken the color. Long, slow cooking also darkens the color.

Tomato-and-apple paste is made from the following: One pint of tomato pulp; one pint of apple pulp, three cups of sugar, one small stick of cinnamon, and one orange, both the juice and grated rind.

Combine all these ingredients and cook the mixture until it is thick and clear. Pour into hot, clean jars and seal.

Both these relishes are delicious with hot or cold meat and may be used in any season.

Agrigraphs

Your entries will make the county fair exhibit just that much better.

During the past year 26,482 persons saw lantern slides loaned by the college of agriculture.

Uncle Ab says that the man who finds the most joy along the way is likely to find it at the end of the journey.

If you have not been making use of the harvest weather forecast service, your county agent can tell you all about it.

Never try to change the size of the bundles on your binder with the tension on compress spring; use the bundle sizer spring.

"Dairy Barn Rearrangement," E 111, is a brand new bulletin of the state college of agriculture at Ithaca, and offers concrete suggestions to help shave the minutes off from chore-time.

The Mississippi experiment station has found that corrosive sublimate is effective for sterilizing against alfalfa anthracnose. A 1-1,000 solution applied for eight minutes, does the business and does not injure germination.

Celery tops are worth saving; they make an attractive garnish, are good in salads, and if spread on a baking tin and dried in a warm oven, they may be crumbled for use in seasoning soups and gravies.
