South Hill

Rath w-ptiony, which is giving the farmers an enforced vacation before the work of digging.

Miss May Dean went to Dunkirk last Thursday for a visit with relatives.

While reaping buckwheat on the McAndrew Hill farm, Thursday morning, Mr. Lawton was seriously injured by a kick from his horse. He was taken to Mr. Livermore's from whence Mrs. Benjamin took him home in her car and cared for him until the arrival of Dr. Stomer of Andover. Later he was taken to the Wellsville hospital where an operation was performed as a last resort, but he died last night. Our people were saddened by the tragic death of the old gentleman, who, in the few months he had lived among us in his quiet, unassuming way, had proved himself a good neighbor. His body was removed Sunday from the Brown funeral home to Bells Run, Pa., his former home, for burial. Besides his wife, with whom we sympathize, he is survived by several sons and daughters of a former marriage.

Mrs. Lawton is spending the week with relatives in Shinglehouse, Pa.

Mrs. Margaret Garvin of Andover was a Sunday guest of her daughter, Mrs. Jim Dean and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Adams of Wellsville were helping in the Horan potato field a few days last week.

Miss Mary Dean of our Lady of Victory hospital, Lackawanna, was operated on in that institute on Friday after a week's illness. Mrs. M. T. Garvin of Andover and Mrs. Robert Dean were with her from Friday until Monday and word is received each day since of an improvement in her condition, which is good news to her family and many friends in this vicinity.

Two daughters of Mrs. Corbits, from New York are her guests this week.

Steve Ordway motored with the Corbit family and Mrs. Lawton to the funeral of Mr. Lawton at Bells Run, Pa., Sunday.

John P. and Mrs. Catherine Dean Howard and Mrs. Margaret Dear and Mrs. Jim Dean were in attendance at the funeral of Miss Mayme Fohren at Wellsville, Wednesday.

NEW BERKEY AND GAY DINING SUITE

Is Your Home a Social Asset?

THE perfect hostess is the woman who has made sure that her home is furnished in the best taste—who is clever enough to know that good taste in home furnishing is a social asset as well as a source of personal satisfaction.

Guests are quick to appreciate the gracious dining-room and the comfortable living room. Good furniture tells its own story and bespeaks the character of the home.

Because we believe in the importance of home furnishing as an expression of personality, and as a social asset, we offer a distinctive collection of furniture which represents years of experience and discrimination. Our selections are based on beauty, correctness in style, and sound value in quality.

THE NORFOLK

Elizabethan England—or Renaissance England, as it is often called—will always address a lively appeal to the imagination. It was an age of castles and wayside inns, of great poets and courtiers who duelled or danced with equal gallantry.

Elizabeth's nobles were exploring the seven seas, and the wealth that poured into England was expended with a free hand. Much noble furniture was naturally created at this time, and the genial spirit of this early style has been charmingly retained by Berkey & Gay in the "Norfolk" Dining Room Suite.

Here walnut, butt walnut, rosewood, maple, and selected gumwood have been artfully combined by the Berkey & Gay craftsmen. Butt walnut in a hand-matched figuring appears on the drawer and door fronts of the sideboard, as well as on the front panels of the chest and china cabinet. The tops and sides of these pieces, as well as the top and apron of the table, are of straight grain walnut. A pierced shaped onlay of rosewood embellishes the doors of the sideboard, while knobs of turned maple are used on the drawers and doors to carry out the desired color tone.

Carved legs and undermouldings, as well as the stretchers, posts, and other solid parts, are made of selected gumwood, since here sturdy strength is more important than elaborate grain figuring.

Beauty of woods and sturdy construction have been combined in these pieces, with unusual features of convenience for usefulness in the home. For instance, the sideboard, besides having commodious drawer and door space, is also furnished with a solid mahogany, push-lid partitioned tray for holding silver pieces, and deeper mahogany trays for linen and glassware. The drawers of all of the pieces, as well as the cupboard space, are carefully finished inside to prevent the soiling of their contents, and are thoroughly dust-proof. These features of Berkey & Gay thoroughness will be appreciated in the home.

Strictly in keeping with the swashbuckling spirit of the design is the open grain wax finish, giving a rich, golden, mellow tone to the various woods.
