Medical Examination The school medical examination by Dr. Wells has been completed and a "follow up" card will be sent to each parent or guardian whose children need medical attention. It is suggested that parents make a note on the back of the card of any medical attention given the child, and return the card to the principal as he will need this data for his annual medical report to the department. The cards need not be returned for a few weeks.

He wishes to enlist the interest of all high school boys in this contest.

Literary Program On Friday afternoon, November 9th, the teachers of the High School department saw the reward for their efforts. The Literary Society became a thing of the present.

The constitution was submitted by the Constitution Committee which was composed of Wallace Cummings, Ferné Greene and Gerald Hann. This was accepted as read with the exception of one article.

The plan is to have each member of the High School English classes, prepared on a certain topic. Then a number of them will be called on to give their work before the Society.

On Friday, the topic was "My Hobby." Marjorie Williams' hobby was: "Listening to My Classmates in Oral English."

Ruby Robinson took for her hobby Physical Training, and last but not least comes our own original, Clara Greene who chose for his: "BASKET BALL!"

Beta Mu Thursday night the Beta Mu held its first annual initiation. Robert Common and Edward Cannon were received into the fraternity, after the initiation the boys of the Beta Mu and the girls of the Kappa Zeta enjoyed a short party in the gymnasium. A good time being reported by all.

WOMAN BADLY HURT AT ANGELICA

Mrs. Mattie Patterson Knocked Down and Dragged.

Angelica, Oct. 19.—The second accident of a serious nature happening at the outskirts of the village within the past week, occurred Saturday night at 5:30 o'clock when Mrs. Mattie Patterson of Hornell was knocked down and dragged several feet under the wheels of a car driven by George Jennings of this village. She is now in the McConnell Nursing Home suffering from terrible lacerations which cover her body from head to foot.

Mrs. Patterson was visiting her mother, Mrs. Anna Ryan who lives at the Jancy and had just left the house when the accident happened. Running down a steep path from the house to the road, she plunged headlong into the highway, just as the car, driven by George Jennings, approached. She was knocked down by the impact and the open driving shaft of the car which was an old Maxwell, caught her clothing and she was dragged some distance before the car could be stopped.

On stopping the car it was found that the body was entangled in the mechanism and it was necessary to jack up the car to remove it. Help was immediately summoned from a nearby garage and the woman was placed in a truck owned by C. R. Eldridge who was passing and was taken to the office of Dr. B. C. Wakeley. Examination proved that life was not extinct and she was taken to the McConnell Nursing Home for treatment of the wounds.

Her injuries proved to be of a most serious nature. A part of the upper lip was torn off and her face Greatest of All Wealth. America's Garden Spot. Alfalfa and Freedom. Killers for Hire Scarce.

Our crops are worth billions every year. That's encouraging. In our mines and oil wells are hundreds of billions stored away, and that's encouraging.

The unused water power of this nation is worth tens of billions, and other tens of billions for irrigation afterward. That's encouraging, and also the fact that in the atmosphere above there are endless billions worth of nitrogen, which can be brought down by electrical power.

But there is greater wealth, and its figures more important. One single city, New York, has for the first time in its history MORE THAN ONE MILLION CHILDREN ENROLLED IN ITS PUBLIC SCHOOL CLASSES.

That is the REAL wealth of today, and the real power of the future.

Take away these children, and this country, with all its mines, water power and fertile soil, would amount to as little as it did when a few Indians possessed it and spent their time murdering each other.

At the Genesee, N. Y., fair Lieutenant-Governor Lowman arranged to ride one mile on the back of a five-ton elephant.

The farmers doubtless laughed, as they saw 150 pounds of human being carried by 10,000 pounds of elephant.

A 10,000 pound elephant will carry on its head one mahout, to guide the big beast, and in the howdah on its back an English gentleman eager to kill a tiger without giving that tiger a chance to kill him.

Consider the gap between Kublai Khan and automobile manufacturers who give you for a few dollars a little machine that will carry seven people forty miles an hour, carrying more than its own weight in freight.

If our progress in THINKING had equalled our progress in transportation, we should be better off than we are.

Riding over the desert lands, designed to be the world's most beautiful garden, from Colorado to Arizona you could not resist buying land hoping to live there some day, at the end of your mighty dollar hunt in the East.

Nothing grows until you irrigate. And when you irrigate EVERYTHING WILL GROW.

Do you put fertilizer or lime on Mojave Desert alfalfa? Not an ounce of either. Alfalfa roots go down eighteen feet thru soil washed down from mountains made up of lime, minerals and centuries of growing and decaying bunch grass, grease wood and sagebrush. You cut your alfalfa seven times a year for fifteen years; then plant it again, irrigate it, and Nature does the rest.

The soil also produces democracy. Any man with a hundred million dollars who things he is better than some other American should go there. He would gather valuable information.

Going thru that country every brown golden hill in the distance more beautiful than any palace or castle, under a magnificent blue sky as big as the country, you care nothing for news that comes out of human swarms in the East.

Your only hope is that the government will know enough to provide the flying machines necessary to take people to that land and to protect it.

John Hulbert, official executioner at Sing Sing prison, quits his job after killing 140 in the electric chair. For this he has been paid $21,000—$150 for each killing.

Will the retiring executioner ever meet, on the other shore, the 140 that he sent on ahead? If so, what will they say to each other? Thank him, very likely.

It is difficult to find another executioner, because he must be a trained electrician, willing to kill for a living. It should be not difficult but IMPOSSIBLE to find such a man in a civilized state.

was torn and cut. Small particles of stone were taken from the face and back where they had been ground into the flesh by contact with the road bed which had been recently repaired. Her whole body was cut and bruised. She is still confined in the home where hopes are still maintained for her recovery.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO IN "MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE"

At the Auditorium, Friday and Saturday Evenings, Oct. 23-24.

The scene is the gorgeous, dissolute court of King Louis XV of France, where love and intrigue are the chief pastimes. Even the King is not immune, neglecting his Queen for the notorious and unscrupulous Madame Pompadour.

Into this dissolute setting comes the beautiful Princess Henriette fresh and innocent from a convent. She falls in love at first sight with the gay, handsome Duc de Chartres, favorite of the King. On learning, however, that he is just another of the flirting dandies of the court, she repulses his advances.

Later, on seeing him perform a great kindness for a servant, she relents and makes a rendezvous with him to try and urge him to forsake his life of pleasure and make a man of himself. Chartres, used to having women forgotten the proprieties for him, makes impassioned love to her and is angry when she rebuffs him.

Madame Pompadour, at whom the Princess has openly sniffed, sees that Henriette and Chartres have quarreled and maliciously suggests to the King that he force them to marry each other. The King agrees. Whereupon Chartres commits the unpardonable sin—he refuses to obey his King, tho by this time he knows he loves Henriette, and is forced to fight his way out of France and across the Channel to England.

Posing as Monsieur Beaucaire, barber to the French Ambassador, Chartres invades Bath, the seaside resort of English society.

Beaucaire becomes infatuated with Lady Mary Carlisle, the belle of Bath. Catching Lord Winterset, an English nobleman sojourning at Bath, cheating at cards, Beaucaire demands, as the price of silence, that Winterset introduce him to Lady Mary. Disguised as a noble, he visits a ball, dances with Lady Mary, and starts an ardent suit for her hand. Winterset, seeking revenge, sets several professional swordsmen upon Beaucaire, but he bests them all.

The climax is reached when, in the midst of a flaming love scene in which Beaucaire has taken the surrendering English beauty into his eager arms, six of Winterset's hirelings attack him at once. In a terrific battle, Beaucaire, the sorely wounded, beats them off. Winterset thereupon appears and denounces him as a barber. To Lady Mary's disgust, Beaucaire does not deny it.

Winterset exposes Beaucaire all over Bath, and Beaucaire is forced to flee the town, declaring however, that he will return and meet Winterset in the assembly room of Bath Castle in a week. The Winterset has the place surrounded with men ordered to kill Beaucaire on sight, the latter, disguised as a woman, makes good his word and is pleading his love to Lady Mary in the assembly room when Winterset enters.

Amid the ensuing confusion, the French ambassador appears and startles the crowd by announcing Beaucaire as the Duc de Chartres and informing him that the King pardons him and desires his return to France. Lady Mary—now—smiles upon him, but Beaucaire shuns her. He declares he is going back to the woman he really loves.

Returning triumphantly to France Chartres immediately seeks Henriette to beg her forgiveness and takes her into his arms.

"DANGEROUS MONEY"

Wednesday evening, October 28, the Auditorium will play another of Paramount's best productions in "Dangerous Money."

As is usual with Paramount pictures, this play holds a lesson that is needed by us all, but told in such a pleasing manner that no offense can be taken.

PRACTICAL INSTRUCTIONS IN HOME SEWING

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

You Can Cut This Dress Without a Pattern

NEW VERSION OF THE JUMPER FROCK

When the jumper dress sprang into popularity, last season, it was greeted as a purely American fashion. Now many of the French dressmakers are evolving clever adaptations of it. Not that one dares hint over here that a style could originate anywhere but in Paris. No matter where the jumper frock originated, the Parisian version of it has many little touches that lend piquancy and style.

The model I have selected for you here is typical. The jumper portion of the dress is of fine tan homespun. The soft satin blouse is also of tan but in a lighter tone. A bright red flower with equally bright green leaves is embroidered in silk at the corner of the square neck. This gay bit of color is distinctly smart.

Two and three quarters yards of thirty-six inch material will make the jumper portion of this dress. All the pieces are cut perfectly straight except at the shoulder seams, which are slightly sloped, as I have shown in the little cutting chart at the right.

Measure on the figure the correct waist length also the skirt length and the width the panel should be. Add three inches on each side of the skirt portion of the front panel for plaits. Mark these measurements on the material and proceed to cut.

In putting the dress together it is a good plan to let the belt extend under the panel so that the plaits may be tacked to it.

This kind of dress also offers splendid makeover possibilities. An old frock that is worn under the arms may be recut along these lines, or a last year's silk dress may be used for the blouse portion. It is important that both the blouse and jumper harmonize well in color and if you are using old materials it may be necessary to dye them in order to get the color effect you desire.

Angelica Man Fatally Injured

Volney E. VanSickle of Angelica was found lying in the road the evening of October 11th, unconscious near that village. It was evident that Mr. VanSickle had been run down by an auto as he was walking in the road, and left where he fell. An examination revealed a punctured chest wall and four broken ribs. He died from the injuries the following morning.
