

To the Citizens of Andover:

The following are nominations on the Democratic Ticket for Town Officers to be elected at the Election on November 3, 1925, which I submit for your approval:

THE TICKET

- For Supervisor
JOSEPH L. WILLIAMS
- For Town Clerk
JAMES D. CHEESMAN
- For Justices of the Peace
EDWARD A. MULLEN
LOW E. HOWLAND
LOU SNYDER
- For Superintendent of Highways
JAMES P. DEAN
- For Assessors
BENJAMIN S. BRUNDAGE, (4 years)
ALMOND M. WOOD, (2 years)
- For Collector
MRS. FLORENCE EARLEY
- For Overseer of Poor
ALBERT J. BROWN
- For Constables
FRANK E. HURD
EDWARD KILBANE
LEO DeREMER
EARL KEMP
CYRENUS S. RENNELS

Each and every one of them, both men and women, from Head of Ticket to foot of same, is well qualified in every way to fill his or her office for which they are seeking. They are all good substantial law-abiding citizens, with the best interests of ALL OF THE PEOPLE of Andover always at heart. As to their AMERICANISM, some of them may not be able to trace their ancestors back to the May Flower, or they may not shout it from the Hill Tops as some of the so-called Simon Pure ones do, still they can be classed as good, plain American Citizens and as such I am asking your support next Tuesday.

I am

JUST A COMMON AMERICAN.

On Friday, October 23rd, the topic for discussion at the meeting of the Literary Society, was one concerning some of the famous ships of the United States Navy, and their commanders. The most important of these, according to the discussion was the ship which received very great honors in the War of 1812, "The Constitution," or more commonly called "Old Ironsides." Other names were brought in and their work for the United States Navy was reported on. The program was as follows:

- Program
- Miss Onnolee Hammell, The Constitution Today
 - Robert Common, Causes of the War of 1812
 - Miss Mary Horan, The Defeat of "The Guerrine"
 - Miss Priscilla MacDougald, "Her Sides Are Made of Iron"
 - Miss Edna Barrett, The Spell is Broken
 - Miss Gertrude O'Connell, Saved by the Poem "Old Ironsides"
 - Clifford Howland, The Freedom of the Seas
 - Miss Helen Smith, Perry's Flagship
 - Miss Lillian Holmes, The Monitor and The Merrimac
 - Miss Dorothea Snyder, MacDonough's Flagship
 - Miss Frances Brundage, Fargut's Fleet at New Orleans
 - Miss Georgia Bines, The Deed of The Century

It was suggested that the topic for the coming Friday should be concerning our late President Theodore Roosevelt as the 27th of October is his birthday.

Miss Baker's mother visited our school, Friday afternoon.

Miss Baker and Miss Stimson spent the week-end in Rochester.

Merchant of Venice

The second year English class is planning to see "The Merchant of Venice," played in Hornell on this Friday evening. This play is being studied in the course and will be very interesting both to them and to those who have already studied it.

Parent-Teachers' Meeting

There will be a meeting of the Parent-Teachers' Association in the study hall on Monday, November 2nd at 8:00 p. m. All members are urged to be present. If you are not a member already come and learn of the organization and take an interest in our school. There is to be a selection of officers at this time.

Hallowe'en Party

A Hallowe'en Party will be given by the Literary Society of the Andover High School on Tuesday evening, November 3rd, at 7:15, in the High School gymnasium. The public is invited. The price of admission is fifteen cents.

The first act on the program will be a one-act minstrel show, entitled "The Darktown Minstrels." The minstrels taking part in the performance have been selected from the members of the Literary Society. There will also be a number of side-shows and a fortune-teller. An orchestra will provide the music for dancing.

At the Auditorium

"NELLIE," THE BEAUTIFUL CLOAK MODEL

At the Auditorium, Saturday Evening, Oct. 31.

Robert Horton, financier is facing a crisis in his affairs. Ill health makes it impossible for him to carry on. Taking advantage of the fact that Thomas Lipton, his cousin, is almost identical in appearance, Horton commands Lipton to take his place on pain of revealing the fact that Lipton is in love with Mrs. Horton. The financier has ordered his wife abroad for a year to avoid a possible scandal. Horton goes away and Lipton undertakes the role of the financier. By the time the year's end comes he has recouped the Horton fortune and tho glad to be released from his false position he has become tremendously attached to the Horton's only child, little Allyn, and rather than leave her to the neglect of the cruel financier, Lipton abducts the child.

Fifteen years later we see Lipton known as John Grey, and his supposed daughter, Nellie, living happily together in a downtown tenement. When Grey becomes ill, Nellie against the advice of her sweet heart, Jack Carrol, finds occupation thru her friend Polly Joy as model in a fashionable modiste shop run by Walter Peck. Mrs. Horton's dissolute nephew. Nellie's innocent beauty attracts the scheming Peck and he attempts to snare her, but Polly Joy and her taxi-cab sweetheart, Shorty Burchell, save Nellie from Peck's clutches.

Thru bad investments, Peck is slowly being wiped out on the market and his appeal to his wealthy aunt, Mrs. Horton, meets the response that she can give him no money until she knows positively the fate of her poor child.

Peck stages a brilliant fashion show in which the ravishing Nellie is the central attraction. Nellie believes she is posing for women only but when the lights go up and she sees men in the audience she refuses to continue to promenade in flimsy garments. Peck demands that Nellie go on. In the ensuing struggle, Peck recognizes by a birthmark that this girl is the missing Allyn, the sole obstacle to his possession of the great Horton estate. His cigarette, dropped during the struggle, starts a raging fire from which the audience and models barely escape. Nellie is rescued by Carroll who had been waiting downstairs for her.

Peck, in desperation over his stock market losses, kidnaps Nellie next day. His hired thugs prepare to carry out their orders. Nellie finds herself prisoner in the slums. She is carried swooning to the elevated track outside her prison window and tied to the rails. Down the tracks comes a train careening, full speed toward the helpless girl. Passengers perceive the peril and hasten to the motorman to discover that he has been stricken with heart failure and there is apparently no way to stop the train. One of the passengers finally manages to gain control, but just in time, for the train is stopped directly beside the body of Nellie.

Carroll has meanwhile found the hiding place of Peck's thugs and in a terrific fight he overcomes Peck and his gang and leaping from the window takes Nellie safely into his embrace. Mrs. Horton has been informed, thru Grey, of the discovery of her long lost daughter and now there is a general rejoicing for not only has she found her child, but in Grey she sees once more the man whom she has always loved.

Nellie promises never to pose for anybody but Carroll again, and Shorty, the taxi-driver, invites his Polly for a drive down to the marriage license bureau.

Many a spill is saved by a graduated measuring cup that holds a little more than a couple!
