Bee Keepers Hit Hard

Hornell, Oct. 25.—Bee keepers in this section have been hit a hard blow the past summer. Henry Sager, residing in the town of Grove, who annually sells $3,000 worth of honey, is the greatest loser. He is the largest owner of bees in this section of the state. He hasn't so much as a nickel's worth to sell this year. Honey in the blows of both buckwheat and clover were lacking this year, and it became necessary to feed the bees.

Is your cow-barn as conveniently laid out as it can be made? "Dairy Barn Rearrangement," a new bulletin of the college of agriculture at Ithaca, is devoted to saving steps and time. Ask for E 111.
