The Wet and Dry Polls

THE drys have been accused of resting on their oars -of feeling a false sense of security regarding the law and its enforcement. Dry speakers have frequently charged that the dry forces are lethargetic and not alert to the influences that are endeavoring to undo prohibition and that have already done all within their power to make it a laughing stock. The charge is not without foundation. The drys al years that prohibition is here to stay; that nothing can bring about the return of the saloons. Altho prohibitionists made a long fight for elimination of the saloon, they won national prohibition easily in comparison to what victory would have cost, had not the war come when it did.

The ease with which the eighteenth amendment was added to the constitution fulled the drys to sleep. They sat back with a feeling of security on the theory that the victory had been won and there was no use to worry about it longer. But the drys forgot that the liquor interests always awake. They forgot that the millions that have been made out of the legalized liquor industry will be used to give it legal status again. The drive for the legalizing of beer and light wine is but the first step. Once this campaign is won, liquor element will again be partially entrenched and will be better able to carry on for the ultimate goal, return of the old days when intoxicating liquor could [ be bought at the corner saloon.

Wet propaganda is reported to be receiving a cool reception in congress. Well, beer and light wine wi spoil without ice.

MARCH marked the completion of fifty years of telecomplete sentence of speech was transmitted over a times. wire electrically.

"Mr. Watson, come here; I want you," said Alexander Graham Bell to his assistant in an adjoining the telephone, and telephone history was There were then two telephones, a transmitter and receiver; today there are more than twenty-four million instruments in existence. The line over which these memorable words were spoken stretched only from room to room; today the organization which bears the great inventor's name owns and operates a vast network of local and long! 500,000 miles. Bell and Watson were then the world' only telephone workers; today a veritable army of emthe Bell banner alone.

The telephone is an American invention, its usefulness has been developed and its popularity extended by American enterprise. Today the United States, with only six per cent. of the world's population, has |" 63 per cent. of the world's telephones.

There are roughly 24,000,000 telephones in exiss. We have in this country nearly two-great thirds of all the telephones in the world.

The other great powers-Britain, France and Germany—lag hopelessly behind in telephone develop- his own home by a policeman. ## Heed the Cold the is deserving of being rated as an enemy of health instead of an annoying pest.

Most of us can tolerate colds during the winter, out when they persist as evidences of spring begin to appear, no one can be blamed for growing impatient. The point is that colds need not be a yoke upon if we take the proper precautions against them. The medical definition of a cold is: "A disordered condition, generally of the respiratory tract, caused y exposure." Tho disagreeable, a common cold is othing to worry about, according to physicians, but t is always a threat and unless given immediate attention, may develop into something genuinely serious. Pneumonia, which is fatal to one out of every four r five people who get it, could be prevented in a large number of cases, physicians say, if the severe, cold, usually the first symptom, receives the right sort of con-

The man who invented the typewriter has affected the lives of millions. Judged by the benefits he has conferred this inventor might well be called great. But how many know that the typewriter was devised by Christopher Sholes, a collecftor of customs at Milwaukee, in 1867?

That recognition of greatness is an accident is another conclusion to be drawn from the old list of the' world's great men. Men are much alike, however! greatly their achievements may vary.
