The Unknown Inventor

Several nations have honored the Unknown Soldier who symbolized the self-sacrificing valor of millions. All humanity might well pay homage to another great unknown whose name and fame are lost in the mist of ages.

Think of the Unknown Inventor who made the first wheel! Out of his epoch-making discovery civilization has grown. That first segment of a forest tree trunk, rolling under its load, was the germ from which sprung railroad, steamship, factory, power plant and almost every other labor-saving mechanism of modern life.

In the truest sense, the great 70,000 horsepower generator in the Niagara power plant is just another monument to the glory of this Unknown Inventor.
