Whose Advertising Do You Pay?

The store that doesn't advertise pays the advertising bill of the one that does.

Every merchant in business pays for advertising, whether he uses it or not. If a competitor's advertising takes any business away from him, the profit he would have made on the lost sale is what his competitor's advertising cost him.

You have, perhaps, wondered how some stores can afford to spend such enormous sums for advertising. That is easy to fathom. Their competitor, who doesn't advertise and whose business they take, pays for their advrtising.

Say the Jones family is a customer of your store. They have $60 which they intend to spend with you. They read the advertising of your competitor and are induced to spend their $60 with him instead of spending it with you. The store makes 20 per cent., or $12 on the sale. They deduct, we will say, the $1 advertising cost and have $11 profit left. The advertising cost them nothing, they got back its cost and had $11 profit they would not ness they take, pays for their advertising.

Who paid for this advertising? Did the advertiser pay? No. He got the cost back, and creased costs.

Did the purchaser pay? No. He paid only the regular price. Then who did pay?

The store that did not advertise paid for his competitor's advertising. He not only paid for the other fellow's advertising, but he paid out of his cash drawer the profit his competitor made on the sale. The store that doesn't advertise pays the advertising bill for the one that does. He pays in loss of sales, profits, and in-

The store that loses business thru not advertising has such high overhead and unit sale cost that it cannot possibly sell goods as cheaply as the store that increases its sales and reduces its cost with advertising.—Flyer Pilot.
