The Cost of Primaries

ANE of the reasons advanced for primary elections, smile about, and keep smiling the whole year thru? with Mrs. Wm. Woodruff on Friday. U to nominate political party candidates, in the days It's a good healthy habit and it's "catching" too. before the primary was general, was that it put the one and the rich on the same basis, in seeking public' who promised such an improvement were false prophets. Senator Newberry of Michigan lost his seat is the senate because it was shown that he spent $190,-000 to win the nomination.

But even that was mild to the Pennsylvania primary, according to evidence which was brought out at onstrating that it's not always safe to bring home + e investigation. Close to two million dollars bacon was expended, the Philadelphia headquarters of one candidate alone showing expenses of $615,000.

The primary is not the panacea for all political cause they live away from home most of the time. ills. This has been amply well demonstrated in every! state where it has been tried. It has been abused just as the convention system was abused by the politicians, except children and imported cheese,

The primary requires candidates for offices of any consequence shall spend large sums of money to make any headway. They have to appeal to a large mass of " voters rather than a selected list such as the convention delegates represented. It is doubtful if its advantages outweigh its disadvantages.

America for Americans

EVERY means that could be devised by afert men has L been employed to keep America for Americans, and b e immigrant has been restricted for the protection of the American laboring man. Now comes a new call for practical Americanism from the National Association of Manufacturers, which

The manufacturers maintain that an intelligently (discriminating attitude continually maintained in pur-)' chases on the part of American buyers with the view of patronizing home industry, at least when its products are not inferior to imported competitive goods, would have a more stimulating effect on many classes of American manufacturers than an increase in the customs tariffs on those articles.

Some may view this as a selfish move on the part of the manufacturers. The demagogue may attack it as capitalistic, but the plea is sound economically and | (deserves consideration by all true Americans. America has a community of interests.
