Less than half a century ago two men stood looking down into the gorge of Niagara Falls. "Jacob, my boy", said the older man, "some day there will be a great power plant here where we are standing.

I may not live to see it, but you will." The vision of the older man, Jacob F. Schoellkopf, has materialized. Today on the banks of Niagara rise huge hydro-electric plants—a fitting monument to the breadth of vision and steadfast faith of the pioneers in the industry.

And Jacob Pfisterer, the younger of those two men, is still an employee in the industry that he has seen grow from a dream to a glorious reality.
