The Leaning Tower

TR. EDOUARD IMBEAUX, ex-professor at the gov-I ernment engineering school and corresponding member of the Academy of Sciences, has a plan to keep the famous "Leaning Tower of Pisa" from toppling over, as it seems certain to do if its foundations continue to sag as they have done for 600 years. Dr. Imbeaux goes on the assumption that the sagging is caused by the flow of subterranean streams flowing toward the sea and preventing the slate and clay which form the foundations from hardening sufficiently to uphold the heavy structure. He proposes) 22.00 to freeze a broad band all around the bottom of the 21.00 tower to a depth of 20 or 80 feet and then inject liquid cement between that band and the walls of the tower.
