If You Were Here

O Love, if you were here This dreary, weary day-If your lips, warm and dear, Found some sweet word to say-

Then hardly would seem drear These skies of wintry gray. But you are far away-How far from me, my dear?

What cheer can warm the day? My heart is chill with fear, Pierced thru with swift dismay; A thought has turned life sere. If you, from far away,

Should come not back, my dear; If I no more might lay My hand on yours, nor hear That voice, now sad, now gay, Caress my listening ear;

If you, from far away, Should come no more, my dear-Then what dire dismay Year joined by hostile year

Would frewn, if I should stay Where memories mock and jeer! But I would come away

To dwell with you, my dear; Thru unknown worlds to stray-Or sleep; nor hope, nor fear,

Nor dream beneath the clay Of all our days that were. . Executor's Sale
