The Way of Life By Bruce Barton

PADLOCKED MINDS

We were discussing Russia at the dinner table of a banker. None of us knew anything about the subject, but that did not prevent a long and animated conversation.

The general opinion, forcibly ex- pressed, was that Stalin and his as- sociates represent the great menace to the present-day world. It was even urged that all the capitalistic powers ought to combine to over- throw the Bolshevik regime.

Finally I made a timid suggestion. I said that it seemed to be prob- able that the Russian experiment will have to be very much modified or it will fail. It appears to run contrary to too many deep-seated human instincts.

Man is moved by the ambition to acquire opportunity and security for his children. The Bolsheviks deny him the right of acquisition. Man is "incurably religious"; the Bolsh- eviks have attempted to abolish God. Sooner or later, man has always re- voluted against unbridled autocracy under whatever guise or name.

"But," I continued, waxing a lit- tle bolder, "any one who looks over the capitalistic countries today must admit that our economic organiza- tion leaves a lot to be desired. Think of the tragedy of wheat selling be- low the cost of production at a time when thousands are standing in bread-lines. What a frightful thing it is for factories to be shut down for lack of orders while a large per- centage of the human race still lacks adequate clothing and shelter.

"Instead of condemning the Rus- sians out of hand, wouldn't it be more sensible to see whether they discover anything, no matter how small, that we could apply to make our own decrepit economic machine a little better?"

Recently I read an article by Pro- fessor Harold J. Laski in which he pointed out how every new idea that ever came into the world has been opposed by the "experts."

"Not even so great a surgeon as Simpson could see merit in Lister's discovery of antiseptic treatment. The opposition to Pasteur was so vehement that he declared regret- fully that he did not know he had so many enemies."

Napoleon scoffed at the steamship. Wellington was never persuaded that the breech-loading rifle was any good. Vanderbilt refused to enter- tain the crazy notion that Westing- house could stop his trains by "jam- ming air against the wheels."

If we keep our minds open to new ideas we are bound to be misled often, and sometimes to be ridicu- lous.

But the surest way of all to be wrong is to assume that God has completed His process of revelation and that the world tomorrow will be exactly like the world today.

MacStingy: "I never deny my wife a single wish."

O'Donoghue: "That's mighty gen- erous of you, old man."

MacStingy: "Oh, you misunder- stand me. It don't cost nothin' to wish, does it?"

Postmen, who walk miles every day, were called upon to wear test shoes and thus aid government sci- entists in experiments on the wear- ing qualities of sole leather.

Lights on Little Economies

By MARIE HULSER

THROUGH an Italian friend I re- cently became acquainted with garlic toast. It is easy to make and particularly good when served with a simple vegetable salad or an Italian supper. Cut French bread into thick slices, brush the slices with oil or melted butter, rub with a cut clove of garlic, and brown the oiled side slightly under the flame of the broiler. Serve hot.

The effectiveness of dusting de- pends largely upon the dust cloth. Some cloths merely wait the dirt from one corner to another, while others absorb the dust particles until they are washed or shaken out. An absorbent or "dustless" duster can be made by immersing a large square of cheese cloth in a basin of strong, hot soapuds. Let it soak for awhile, then wring out and dry. Use in the regular way to dust and polish. When the cloth becomes soiled it can be washed and re-treated.

Did you know that the length of time required for food to bake often depends upon the material of which the utensil, in which it is baked, is made? A comparative study of utensils intended for cook- ing vegetables in the oven indicated that cast iron heated the quickest, with glass, china and enameled ware next. Stainless steel and aluminum were slowest.

Good cooks know that too rapid cooking will destroy food. It re- duces its nutritive properties by driving them off in the form of vapor. A fuel that is easy of regulation is therefore best for cooking purposes, such as the gas flame. A method conducive to best results is to commence the cooking over a full gas flame, and when the simmer begins to transfer to the simmer burner, or turn the gas very low.

No matter how well your gas refrigerator operates it should be kept clean. About once a week, empty the box of every bit of food and wash shelves with tepid water and soap to which a little baking soda has been added. Wipe off the outside with a damp, soapy cloth.

Do not preheat the oven on your gas range longer than is necessary to bring it up to the temperature desired. If yours is equipped with a heat control, preheat only until the large flame cuts to a small flame. If you do not have a heat control get a thermometer and use a high flame only until the tempera- ture desired is reached, then turn down the gas. There is no use in wasting fuel by preheating the oven longer than necessary.
