NEWS NOTES

from the

COUNTY SEAT

By HAZEL M. C. SAUNDERS

Allegany County Press Association Service

There were 1,300 applications for membership received this year and only 47 per cent were elected to fellowships. Of the 600 chosen from all over the country were Dr. Champlin and Dr. Grenolds.

Dr. Grenolds was born at Troupsburg, Steuben county, New York, and spent his early life there. He graduated from the Troupsburg high school and then took a post graduate course at the Canisteo, N. Y., high school.

He next attended the University of Buffalo where he completed his medical course in 1910, being graduated with the degree of M. D.

After a year's internship at the Erie County hospital in Buffalo, N. Y., and nine months' internship at the Sisters' Hospital in Buffalo, he started the general practice in Andover, N. Y. He was located there for ten years.

In 1921 he left Andover and studied for a year at the Post Graduate hospital in New York City, specializing in diseases of the eye, ear, nose and throat. He then went to Europe for another year's study at Vienna, Austria and Berlin, Germany.

Returning to this country in 1924 he located in Westerlo and opened the first office in the new Washington Trust Building on September 21 of that year. After being there a little over a year, he moved his office to his home at 9 Elm street, where it has since been located.

He has specialized in treating the eye, ear, nose and throat since he started his practice here seven years ago. In 1928 he went to England to study under Sir William Lister in the London Ophthalmic hospital for two months.

He is a member of the Westerlo Physicians' Association, being president of the organization at the present time, the Washington County Medical Society, the Medical Society of the State of Rhode Island and the American Medical Association.

HUMORETTES

"Now," began the teacher peevishly, "what year have we, Harold?" Little Harold pondered and replied: "1930 in the daytime and 1927 at night."

"How do you figure we are so far behind at night?" asked the teacher. "It takes three years for starlight to reach us," said the boy.

Theresa: "Do you intend to accept Harry?"

Matilda: "That all depends upon circumstances."

Theresa: "What circumstances?"

Matilda: "Why, his, of course."

MILK

A great deal of fuss is being made, especially in New York, over the "spread" between the retail price of bottled, pasteurized milk delivered at the customer's front door, and the price paid for raw milk to the farmer.

Milk delivered under those conditions in New York costs the consumer 15 cents a quart. The farmer whose cows produce it, anywhere from 100 to 400 miles away, gets from four to six cents a quart. I don't think the farmer is getting enough for his milk, as a rule, but I don't think the city people are paying too much. Milk is the most rapidly perishable product of the farm. It must be marketed almost immediately after it comes from the cow. Even with a huge system for utilization of the unsold surplus, in the form of butter and cheese, there is a high percentage of loss in the handling of milk.

I think farmers should get more for their milk, and where they operate their own co-operative creameries they do. In my home county there are two main valleys. In one valley the dairymen sell individually to the big distributors of milk and are now getting about four cents a quart. In the other valley they are organized and they keep the price up close to six cents.

RESEARCH

Out of one of the big industrial research laboratories there came not long ago a new kind of glue. It fastens leather to leather so firmly that the leather will tear before the cement gives away. It is flexible and water will not affect it. One result of this has been to cheapen the cost of shoes. Twenty or more shoe manufacturers are now making shoes in which the soles are fastened on with this new cement, instead of being sewed on.

From the same laboratory there came a preparation which keeps rubber from decaying. The reason your tires last longer than they used to is because the rubber is treated with this substance.

New materials which will form the basis of new industries, and make life easier and cheaper, are pouring out of the scientific laboratories in a deepening stream. Science is literally making the world over.

LIPTON

There have been few more dramatic careers in modern times than that of Sir Thomas Lipton, who died the other day. Born in Ireland of Scottish parents, he started in business on his own account with no capital to speak of, with a little green grocery in Glasgow, while he was still in his teens. He became the world's largest merchant in foods, the friend of royalty, the idol of sportsmen.

Sir Thomas once attributed his success to advertising. He was the world's first great advertiser in his line. Because he was "in trade" British nobility sneered at him, but the late King Edward VII. put him up for membership in the Marlborough Club, to which nobody is admitted unless proposed by the King.

It is not every man of whom it can be said when he passes on that the world is better for his having been with us, but I think that is true of Tom Lipton.

MOVIES

I talked the other day with one of the gentlemen who are helping Mr. Will H. Hays to try to improve the moral and artistic standards of the movies. He convinced me that the Hays organization is making a sincere and vigorous effort to improve the tone of the picture.

Perhaps the time will come when the movies no longer teach the young that "wealth" means the same thing as "happiness" and that "love" is a physiological term. There is drama and comedy enough in the lives of decent, ordinary folk who are struggling against heavy odds to make all the movies the world needs for all time to come.

WHISTLING

Professor Charles Gray Shaw of New York University said the other day that men who whistle are of low intelligence. I agree that most whistlers are of low musical ability, but I think Professor Shaw was talking about something on which he is not informed.

The urge to produce music exists in nine-tenths of the human race. The majority of men take it out in whistling. It is almost instinctive for a man to whistle when he is alone, especially in the country. There is an old expression, "whistling to keep your courage up," which is not without sound foundation.

On a lonely road, in the silent night the sound of one's own whistling is a relief from the sense of isolation.

What Professor Shaw probably meant is that the man who whistles where it can annoy other people is of low intelligence. One of the first things a printer's apprentice learns is that he will get a clout on the head if he persists in whistling around the shop.

WHEN BABIES FRET

THERE are times when a baby is too fretful or feverish to be sung to sleep. There are some pains a mother cannot pat away. But there's quick comfort in Castoria!

For diarrhea, and other infantile ills, give this pure vegetable preparation. Whenever coated tongues tell of constipation; whenever there's any sign of sluggishness. Castoria has a good taste; children love to take it. Buy the genuine—with Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on wrapper.

MORE POWER TO THEM

In Yankeealand they have a plan to glorify the common man, for, when town meeting starts its labors, he's fairly equal to his neighbors. He has a voice and vote spent the way his taxes shall be spent. Men are not equal here below, however we try to make them so. Some have ideas and well can talk, for some both tongue and thinking balk. The wealth and brains be autocratic authoritative, magistratic, town meeting still is democratic. They meet one day and then are gone, but public business must go on; so they elect Bill, George and Jim to govern in the interim. "Selectmen," that's the regular name, and mighty power they give the same. The other day I took a jaunt to Windsor County in Vermont. A sign demanded cars be slowed to guard an intersecting road. "Ten miles an hour," that's what they said, until you passed the road ahead. "Selectmen's order," so they signed it—behold the people's power behind it. "Ten miles an hour," they say it flat. D'you 'spose they get away with that. They have a good state road, those chaps, a red line road on all the maps. Some cars that pass are old and pokey, some cost ten thousand plus, by hokey. The rich and poor, the high and low along that Vermont highway go. But them selectmen aim to slack 'em with their town meeting for to back 'em. "Ten miles an hour," that's pretty slick—by gosh, I hope they make it stick.—BOB ADAMS.
