observed national holiday that few people realize of their error of judgment. That is pure and unthat its general observance on the last Thursday in November is quite a recent development. All of the states of New England and some of the other northern that more than two or three states picked the same day. The real "mother of Thanksgiving Day" was Mrs.

Sarah Josepha Hale, who was the editor of the first Lady's Book. Mrs. Hale, before 1850, tried to get the President of the United States to issue a proclamation for a national Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Ruth E. Finley, in her new book, "The Lady of Godey's," tells) how she bombarded president after president with her first national Thanksgiving proclamation, naming last Thursday in November as its date. From that time on every President has issued such a proclamation, and since the 1870's the Governor of every state has] also proclaimed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving Day.
