U. S. MAKES DRIVE ON COUNTERFEITERS

Secret Service Men Round Up 138 Suspects.

Washington.—Secret service, aided by local police, made 138 arrests in the country last month for counterfeiting. This is a record for one month and evidence of the vigor with which the campaign against counterfeiting is being conducted. Most of the counterfeiting is in $5 and $10 bills, all of which are declared by experts to be only fair work.

which are declared by experts to be only fair work.

The bills are pussed in small communities and in the suburbs or congested districts of large cities and reach the banks and big business houses, which promptly bundle them up for deposit or to be sent to Washington for redemption with the result that the counterfeits are not often detected by the sent the counterfeits are not often detected by the sent the counterfeits are not often detected. that the commenters are not considered tected before reaching Washington. "Congestion of the court calendars and leniency in court sentences is party responsible for the present sitnation in counterfeiting," said W. H.
Moran, chief of the secret revenue

Moran, chief of the secret revenue service.

"We need quicker action in bringing counterfeiters to trial and longerjail sentences. Counterfeiting is the most despicable business in the world, for, if successful, it is always an innocent person who suffers and it may be his last cent in the world."

Moran emphatically denied the smaller paper money now in use in this country has anything to do with the increase in counterfeiting. "A counterfeit is a counterfeit," he said. "It is no easier to counterfeit a small bill than a large one. The faces of the Presidents are the same size on both the old and new bills and that part of the bill is the most difficult for any counterfeiter to imitate."

The rapidity with which the counterfeiters are being arrested encourages Moran in the belief that no of tomatoes.

Now we eat tomatoes in everything, even in clam chowder, where they have no business to be.

I saw some figures the other day about the latest development of the tomato business, the canned and bottled tomato juice. More than 700,000 cans and nearly half a million bottles were sold last year. People drink tomato juice because they think it is good for them.

The world has changed a lot in a hundred years.

BUYING

Everybody isn't broke, and not all industries are on the verge of bankruptcy. I talked the other night with the New York distributor of one of the popular makes of electric refrigerators. He told me that his company had just completed a nationwide selling competition, in which every distributor was given a certain quota of sales as the goal to aim at, and that every one of them had sold more refrigerators than he had been asked to sell. My New York friend's organization disposed of more than 20,000 refrigerators in 21 days.

Since the cheapest of these refrigerators sells for $250, and the average is about $350, that means that the people of this one locality spent around $7,000,000 for refrigerators in these so-called hard times. The truth seems to be that people are buying things that they really feel the need of, when they can get them at a fair price and on easy terms.

THIEVES

A boy in the Navy who swipes a bottle of milk or a piece of pie in the cook's galley when he is hungry, or who casually helps himself to a pack of cigarettes from a messmate's locker, is not to be branded as a thief, the Secretary of the Navy has ordered. I think Mr. Adams is right.

The Navy takes boys at the age of 17, most of them from homes where such things as pie are more or less common property, and it is the most natural thing in the world for a hungry boy to help himself to something to eat, without the sightest suspicion in his own mind that he is committing an offense. And hoys are always hungry.

Discipline in the Navy and the Army is, of course, essential. There is a big difference, however, between treating enlisted men as if they were the officers' slaves, and treating them as what they are, decent American boys.

WOOLLEY

WOOLLEY

In appointing Miss Mary Emma Woolley President of Wellesley College, as one of the American delegates to the International Disarmament Conference, Mr. Hoover has not only recognized that women have a very vital interest in the subject of war and its prevention, but he has paid a merited compliment to a great teacher and a life long worker in the cause of peace. Miss Woolley will be the first woman in history to be an official representative of a government in an international conference. Everyone who knows her, or who knows anything about her 30 years career as President of Wellesley, will agree that her part in the conference will be an active one and that whatevershe has to say there will be listened to with respect.

WHO ARE THEY?

A man stopped me on the street to say that he had some important information. "They are going to information.

information. "They are going to put the market up in the next few weeks." he said.
"Who are they?" I asked him. He looked at me scornfully, as tho I ought to be ashamed to confess such ignorance. "Why they," he answered, "are the big shots, the insiders, the international bankers, the Interests."
"Oh," I said, and thanked him and went on my way.

"Oh." I said, and thanked him and went on my way.
When I graduated from college I had a great deal of awe of the Interests, and at that period they were indeed pretty powerful. Important corporations were comparatively few and those few were small in comparison with today.
Their stock was controlled by a compact group of men, who, by acting together, could often make or break the market. Morgan could get them all in a room and tell them what to do.
But times have changed. Cor-

But times have changed. Corporations are enormous; shares are scattered among millions. They the interests, are not what they need to be the interests, are not what they used to be.

One time I served on a civic committee, most of whose members were bankers. The executive secretary was a bright young college graduate. He said to me: "I don't have to worry; when this job is over these big bankers will take care of me."

these big bankers will take care of line."

Well, the job was over, and I told him: "You are going to have a great shock as to the power of the International Bankers. They may control millions, but one thing they can't do is to get you a job. They may send you to the heads of certain corporations with letters of introduction, but they can't insist that you be hired. Those corporation managers will reply to the bankers, "You hold us responsible; you must let us alone."

It turned out as I predicted. The young man finally secured a job, but not by any help of the Interestal.

I have seen several national elections, but never one in which the partners of any of the big international banking houses were agreed upon a candidate.

Two partners, sifting side by side, would offset each other's votes.

In the last analysis, who are they? I'll tell you. You and I are they. We run things. A business may have millions of capital, big plants, and huge sales forces. But if you and I do not like its product, all these huge assests are merely liabilities.

Talleyrand said a shrewd thing when he remerked. "These is to the memorated the product in the partners of any of the partners of any of the partners, sitting side by side, would offset each other's votes.

Talleyrand said a shrewd thing when he remarked: "There is one reson wiser than anybody, and that is everybody," You and I are everybody, and we decide.

Mr. Morgan does not awe me. Even the editor of this paper, who is my boss, does not fill me with any 131.23 great alarm. But believe me, I care about you, gentle reader.
