HAIL FITZGIBBONS AS LABOR'S FRIEND

More than a quarter of a century ago, John S. Fitzgibbons, Democratic nominee for Congressman-at-Large from New York State, cast his bread upon the waters of labor and today it is being returned by the united support of that great army of citizens who toil for a livelihood.

Mr. Fitzgibbons knows full well the lot of the working man. He began life as a railroad train and yardman and he has never lost his sympathy for the underprivileged, in whose behalf he has marched staunchly forward.

No sooner was his selection for Congressman-at-Large announced, than the Fitzgibbons home at Glenmore, in Oneida county, became deluged with complimentary messages from powerful labor leaders and lowly workers, all enlisting in the campaign to assure his election.

The rise of Mr. Fitzgibbons in politics has been as steady as it is brilliant. A year before he quit the railroad yards, he became a candidate for alderman in his home ward and won handily, serving in the Common Council of Oswego.

Then following three terms as mayor, during which he established a Health Center, the first in a third class city of this State, and a high school costing half a million dollars.

Appointed referee of the State Workmen's Compensation Department, Mr. Fitzgibbons resigned a year later to undertake a task that had always been dear to his heart—that of legislative agent for the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

He became an expert in interpreting the compensation law and was the means of bringing relief to thousands of injured workmen.

HARRASSED SEE HOPE IN WAGNER VICTORY

Wherever his speaking itinerary takes him, audiences of Senator Robert F. Wagner clamor for a discussion of that subject nearest their heart and the hearts of their families—unemployment relief.

Hailed as the champion of the harassed and the down-trodden, the great mass of voters in this state have come to realize there is no man in public life today who understands so thoroughly and who has done so much to correct the chaos existing among wage-earners.

And they likewise have come to realize that great as his achievements have been there is much still to be accomplished and that he must be returned to the halls of Congress if the dread economic situation is to be remedied speedily and effectively.
