Sixty-seven per cent of the entire California fruit crop is dried and exported. These fruits are sun-dried by nature. This tends to preserve them once they have become tree ripened. The sun-drying process reduces the weight two-thirds to seven-eighths but preserves the original food value. Each pound of sun-dried fruit is intrinsically worth several times an equal weight in fresh fruit.
We are selling California Prunes, (40-50 size) at 10c pound.
Raisins were found in the tomb of Phtahotep who died 4,500 years ago. These raisins were probably sun-dried, but we have definite historical proof that dates and figs were dried in ovens. Dried fruits were considered so precious a delicacy that they were laid before the Egyptian gods as offerings. How well these ancient people understood and appreciated true food value.
Our dried fruits are packed sanitary, by us, in cellophane bags for your protection.
Stock your pantry now with our pure fruit flavor Flav-R-Jell (6 flavors)—6 for 25c.
