> One hundred years ago, or more, or less, You braved the perils of a wilderness!

You faced the hardships of a bleak frontier-Courageous, earnest, noble Pioneer! It mattered not that your heroic band Broke trail across a rugged, unknown land, It mattered not that danger and despair And loneliness were waiting for you there; It mattered not that you had left behind The comforts you could never hope to find; Your mother-heart was filled with faith and cheer, / And life was good, for those you loved were near.

Yours was the spirit humble, brave and free That guided well a nation's destiny; Yours was the fortitude and wholesome grace That made a cabin joy's abiding-place; Yours was the charm and noble strength of soul That ever sought a better, higher goal! And we, who are your sons and daughters, pay Our tribute of esteem to you today; Rejoicing in that priceless heritage That grows more glorious from age to age, We voice our veneration for you here, Courageous, earnest, noble Pioneer!
