Because while Mrs. B's use of electricity has gone steadily up, the cost of electricity has gone down. A few years ago Mrs. B. had only a toaster and an electric iron. Now she has an electric refrigerator, a vacuum cleaner, and a washing machine. A checkun shows she is using just about twice as much electricity as before . . . yet she pays only a few pennies a day

You'd expect to pay twice as much for two tons of coal as for one, wouldn't you? But with electricity it's different. The more you use, the less each unit costs. And whether you use much or little, the cost has gone steadily down.

It's sound economy to let electricity do as much of your work as possible, for electricity is the biggest
