The allied nations of the World War have been aware of the fact that Germany has been secretly rearming for several years. Hundreds of thousands men have been diligently trained in military science under guise of various pretexts. A huge air force has been trained and hundreds of planes belonging to so termed commercial and sports organizations are capable of being transformed into fighting planes on short notice. Munitions and military equipment factories have been operated on virtual war time schedules for many months in the feverish haste to rearm Germany

All of these things have been taking place and only now has Hitler dared to come out in the open in his defiance of the Verscilles treaty. Protests are flying thick and fast in the European air but the effort " protecting might well be saved for Hitler is turning a
