Missing Girl Located At Friendship

Mary Maschiana, 17 years old, reported missing from her home at Cohocton, N. Y., for several weeks, appeared on the streets of Friendship village last week and attracted attention by her aimless wandering, was trailed by officers. In the late afternoon she walked out to a hillside where she evidently arranged to pass the night. Returning she purchased a ticket to the community theatre from which she was taken into custody by the police who communicated with her parents who had made a frantic search for her and arrived in Friendship that night taking her home with them.

Clarksville Man Catches Thief

Nick Trenkle of Clarksville recently had the surprise of his life one night. He had a hunch to go to his lease in the late evening for some reason, and met a Bradford truck with a load of pipe. He took the truck license number and went on up to his lease and found a string of casing gone, then went to Bradford, hunted up the truck, found it and the pipe where it was sold. He got the parties and it was said that the truck man owned up and tried to settle. He also confessed to taking pipe from Bolivar parties.

State Denies 13 Milk Licenses

The Division of Milk Control denied ten applications for milk dealers' licenses, revoked the conditional licenses of two dealers, and revoked one store license from May 8 to June 17, according to Kenneth F. Fee, director of the division. All of the 13 dealers were given hearings.

Most of the applicants were denied licenses because it was deemed that the entry of new dealers in the prescribed territories would present destructive competition and threaten the stability of the markets in communities already adequately served. The revocations were ordered on the grounds of violations of one or more official orders issued by the division.

Certified Seed Potato Standards Changed

A new section known as A-2 has been added by the Department of Agriculture and Markets to certified seed potato requirements providing that at the option of the grower, each field may be further represented by a sample of 200 tubers taken from the same seed lot and planted in tuber units by the grower on his farm. That is in addition to the 100 sample tubers required to be sent to the State college of agriculture and grown there under observation.

If the option is elected, the percentage of disease in the sample plot is to be averaged with that found in the grower's tuber unit plot prior to August 1. Fields shall be disqualified if the average percentage of disease in the sample tubers on his own farm and those at the State college exceeds the following:

Mosaic, 8 per cent.; leaf roll, 4.5 per cent.; spindle tuber, 4.5 per cent.; yellow leaf, 3 per cent, and all combined eight per cent.

THIS WEEK IN ALBANY

Albany, June 20.—Events of the last week or two lead one to wonder whether the Republican orators believe voters in rural sections and smaller communities know less about what is happening in state government than the city voters.

A recent speech by Chase Mellen, Jr., Republican leader of New York county, is a classic example.

Mr. Mellen left Broadway the other day and went to Cairo, Greene county, to address a group of Young Republicans. He talked at great length about the recent session of the Legislature and made certain statements about the Democrats who controlled both houses.

"The session," Mr. Mellen told his audience, "ended on one of the sourest of sour notes—a $300,000 appropriation for a legislative committee which has been functioning a year, has already spent $200,000 of the taxpayers' money and to date has accomplished absolutely nothing."

That statement might have gone over with strict partisans, who would be willing to overlook certain matters which the youthful Republican chairman of New York county failed to mention. For example, he neglected to state that the committee in question consists of nine Republicans and nine Democrats; that whatever patronage there is shared by both parties; that the Republican leaders of Senate and Assembly are active members, and that none of the Republican leaders raised their voices against the appropriation.

Does Mr. Mellen include members of his own party in that alleged "sour note?"

Mr. Mellen then referred to the committee which investigated New York City's affairs several years ago. "And the committee to investigate the affairs of the city of New York didn't get anything like $300,000 in its complete life," he said.

Well, just to keep the record quite straight the committee which investigated New York City received appropriations totaling $750,000.

Whoever is supplying Mr. Mellen with information for his political speeches should be a little more careful of the facts. Otherwise the upstate voters will begin to believe there is a deliberate campaign of misrepresentation under way.

Governor Lehman is back at his desk again after a vacation in Bermuda, his first in several years. The chief executive acquired a heavy tan and appeared to be well rested.

Someone asked the governor if he had done much fishing while he was away.

"Not much," he replied, "except trying to fish golf balls out of water hazards."

One of the first problems laid before the governor when his ship docked was a request that a special grand jury be impeached to investigate alleged vice conditions in New York City. What, under a Republican-Fusion administration?

The idea seemed to be that the blame for vice, if any existed, should rest on the shoulders of the district attorney of New York county, who happened to be a Democrat.

Governor Lehman quietly announced that he would confer with the mayor and the police commissioner before acting.

"I want to get to the bottom of the situation," he explained. "It seems to me that none is better qualified to tell me the facts than the police commissioner."

The governor seems to have placed his finger on the exact center of the situation.

Homer W. Storey, clerk of the Assembly, has been appointed chairman of the Democratic campaign forces in Monroe county for the summer and fall.

Mr. Storey sends word that Monroe is well satisfied with its 1935 Democratic representatives and that there will be no Republican assembly gains in that county.

Senator George Kelley of Rochester also has been busy recently. He is in great demand as a speaker. During the last two weeks he addressed rallies in Chemung and Wyoming and Sullivan counties.

The value of newspaper advertising was demonstrated up to the hill last week by the new bureau of state publicity in the conservation department.

Allen Reagan, head of the bureau, inserted advertisements in a group of newspapers informing the public that a booklet was available on the advantages of New York State as a tourist center.

Within three days the department had received 5,000 applications for the booklet and they are still streaming in.

Speaker Irwin Steingut of the Assembly was a guest at the White House last week. The speaker was closely associated with President Roosevelt when the latter was Governor and they have continued their friendship.

Reports from Washington indicate that the President is keenly interested in the approaching Assembly elections and that he is confident his state will remain in the Democratic fold.
