WEATHER affects the length of time children sleep. Naps are longer on rainy days. Boys are likely to sleep longer than girls. The first day of a severe weather change, the length of sleep drops markedly. MORE RAIN, more rabbits. So says Dr. Charles T. Voorhies of the University of Arizona, who found that long-eared jackrabbits on the plateaus of the southwest have litters which contain more young in rainy weather than those born during the dry season. CORN is affected with diabetes—plants form sugar that they cannot use—to an extent to damage them seriously. Prof. William H. Ayster of Bucknell University, New Orleans, finds that the disease is hereditary. Sugar accumulates in the leaves until they burst, killing the plant. But if kept in the dark, the condition is not developed. IT takes half a pound of feed to persuade a hen to lay an egg. CABBAGE, onions and celery tend to lose their minerals when cooked and are best eaten raw. IF a city directory for New York were to be compiled, it is estimated that 100,000 days of work would be given unemployed persons. LOCKJAW is caused by a germ which lives in the intestines of domestic animals and contaminates the soil of barnyards, pastures and country roads. A rusty instrument is likely to have more direct dirt sticking to it than a smooth instrument, and this is the only reason it is more dangerous. The germ, when it gets into the tissues of the body, produces a strong poison which is absorbed by the nerves, carried to the brain, and produces convulsions and usually death. If all wounds, even small ones, are quickly cauterized, there is little danger of contracting this disease, which is difficult to treat once it has developed. THE United States has 41 inhabitants per square mile; Germany 240; Great Britain, 435; Belgium, 684.
