the phone operator's place to inquire into their business and have them take seats there. But that applies ordinarily only to strangers. Since these hearings, Mr. Trumbull has had free access to the library; he may have had some reason for bringing her here.

"I'll have to question him about it," Rankin remarked and turned to the doctor. "Have you moved the body, Dr. Clark, or did it lie this way when you arrived?"

"I did not disturb it for my ex- amination," the physician answered. The detective indicated the door to 1505, that led into the corridor. "Then if she was killed here, and that door is locked, it simplifies mat- ters. At least, it limits the criminal to some one arriving thru fifteen or seven and to employees and mem- bers of the firm."

"That door is never used and is always bolted, Mr. Rankin," Mr. Dawson stated. "It requires a sep- arate key from the other two en- trances. Without a key, no one could possibly open it from the hall."

"Unless it was already unlatched from the inside," Rankin contradicted.

Halfway to the door, he paused to draw a handkerchief from his pocket. Careful not to grasp the knob, he wrapped the handkerchief gingerly about the stem and exerted pressure. It turned and the door opened.

SCHOOL can be made an effective health agency if parents will accept and profit by the suggestions of the school physician, and make the school nurse a welcome visitor at the home. Parents, who think they know best, are relying on a little knowledge which we have been told is a dangerous thing. But a little knowledge is never a dangerous thing, if we know that it is only a little, and are eager for more from persons whose life-work it is to acquire and distribute it.

MILLIONS of meteors fall upon the earth each year, but they bulk so little in mass that billions of years would pass before the circumference of the earth increased one inch.

ARE your children afraid of storms—do they cry when it thunders? Try bringing this fear out in the open. One mother, at each clap of thunder, cried "Boom!" and encouraged the children to outdo her in noise making. Active enjoyment was the result, and soon thunder had occasioned only casual comment.
