In his welcoming address to the students of Alfred University, at the beginning of the 100th year of the existence of Alfred University, President J. Nelson Norwood sounded a most optimistic note as he emphatically stated to the student body of 600 that "Conditions are changing for the better."

In his outline of several events scheduled in the year's activities, he mentioned Founders Day on December 5th and referred to the elaborate program already in the forming for commencement time, June next.

With two such personalities as President Norwood and Dr. Boothe C. Davis, president emeritus in cooperation a splendid year's program for Alfred is assured.

HOW, WHAT and WHY?

The Andover News has arranged with the Office of Information of the New York State colleges of agriculture and home economics to answer questions about problems of farm and home. If you enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope and mention the name of this paper you will receive a direct reply to your query from the colleges. Do not ask more than one question in one letter or on one post card. Ask as many questions as you like, but make each one a separate communication.

Canning Dried Beef

Mrs. H. C. Y., Phoenix, asks: "Is it possible for canned dried beef, that is already sliced from the store, to be canned at home? If so, please send me a bulletin on it."

Professor Marion C. Pfund of the state college of home economics answers: "Cornell bulletin E-261 on home canning has been sent to you. You will see in the bulletin that raw beef may be canned directly. If, however, the beef has been already cooked, it may be canned in a similar way without changing the processing period at all.

"If the beef is dried, I believe the processing period would have to be increased another 30 minutes. Be sure, also, to can only in small jars, as jars without liquid require a longer time for the heat to penetrate to the center."

Planting Gladiolus

R. S., Camden, asks: "When should gladiolus be planted? What is the best farm fertilizer and when should it be applied? How many thrips be recognized?"

A. M. S. Pridham of the floriculture department replies: "The gladiolus grows from a corm, often referred to as a bulb. The corms are planted in the spring because, as a rule, those left in the ground throughout the winter are killed by freezing.

"The gladiolus grows satisfactorily in many types of soil, and especially well in a rich, well-drained loam that is slightly acid.

"A liberal application of barnyard manure is ideal as a fertilizer. When commercial fertilizers are also used or are substituted, they should be applied when the plants are from six to ten inches high. Five pounds of the 10-20-10 mixture for each hundred feet of row is suggested as a suitable application.

"The gladiolus thrips is a tiny insect which hides in the folds of the leaves and flower buds. The insect tears the plant tissue and thus discolors the flowers and leaves. Where infestation is severe, the foliage has a silvery gray appearance, and the flowers fail to open properly.

"The adult thrips is black, with a gray band near the center of the body. The young are yellow to orange in color and are about the same size as the adults."
