The constitution says the President may not veto any part of a hill. He must veto it all or none. President Roosevelt, anxious to aid our New York dairymen, signed the bill altho it contained the abnoxious potato control feature.

The law is dead, as Secretary Wallace indicated. But how much nicer it would have been for the secretary to have delayed this announcement until after the Assembly elections in this state. For his statement removes one of the few things our Republican friends had to talk about. But most sensible people could not . see anyway what connection there was between the potato control law and the election of Assemblymen in New York State. However, against such a splendid record of public service as the Democratic Legislature made in its first year of coutral in 21 years it in hard for our Republicar friends to find any superly

They would like to be artists, or perhaps they are interested in business, and are making extravagant wishes for high positions. They give little consideration to the preparation that is necessary to do the really worth-while things that they think they would like to have or to d The fact is, if they would practice doing first the things at hand they would, in a very natural way, soon be doing greater things. There seems to be a tendency among most persons always to wait until conditions are more favorable before beginning to do a thing. As a matter of fact, the only time that conditions are more favorable is when we have decided what to do and that we are ready to begin doing it.
