"Pete"—Snowfences — and Spring

The robins may fool us with their half-frozen chirping into thinking that spring in all its glory is here—but when "Pete" Howland and his road gang get out and begin taking down the snowfences, we are sure that it's the real McCoy, and "Pete" is busy taking them down and storing them away this week.

We have found in past years that when the snowfences are down there is no surer indication that all the worry of winter is past. It is almost as sure a sign of spring as "Cal's" straw hat is of the arrival of summer.

Fishermen Want Rain

According to the local nimrods, better versed in fish and fishing conditions, there will be no good fishing this year until we have a real heavy rain sufficient to wash the creeks clean of the moss now abundant in most every stream.

This moss, upon which the fish feed, is also the home of various kinds of insect life, which is all the food the finny tribe desires. Several trout caught this spring, upon being examined, were well filled with water-bugs and small white worms, besides other material picked up from the mossy vegetation.

(Thursday morning)—They sure got it Wednesday night—1.09 inches rain fell between suns. The creek below town was carrying all the water it could and we understand that farther down it overflowed its banks.
