Moore About Paint

We sometimes wonder if you good people who read our Store News do not sometimes get tired of our everlasting chatter about paint. However, we cannot resist to continue the paint subject, for we believe it to be one of the most interesting of all the goods we have to sell.

Old traditions and practices are being rapidly discontinued in the paint business and the Benj. Moore Co. are outstanding in their contribution to the most constructive of these improvements.

There is no better paint on the market than that made by the Moore Company; tests made by various government and other agencies have proven this fact; also, that their prices are lower than other makes of equal quality.

So when you paint with Moore's you have absolute assurance of the best job at the lowest cost. We cannot recommend this paint highly enough—for both interior and exterior jobs—therefore, we urge you to use Moore's Paints, and be convinced of its superior quality at economy prices.

Bible School Lesson
By REV. CHARLES E. DUNN
The Forbearance of Isaac
Lesson for May 16. Genesis 26:12-25
Golden Text: Matt. 5:9
Isaac is a striking contrast to his father, Abraham. While Abraham was a pioneer, Isaac was a settler. Abraham was of an active, energetic temperament. Isaac, on the other hand, was gentle and passive. Abraham thought in world terms for he was a traveler and founder of colonies. But Isaac was a peaceful family man, loyal to his home.
At first thought Abraham seems the greater of the two. And history does award him a more prominent niche in its gallery of heroes. Yet Isaac, in his way, was a great soul too. Abraham sacrificed by accepting heavy burdens which carried him far afield. Isaac, on the contrary, stayed quietly where he was brought up, using the same wells his father had dug, and calling them by the same names.
"And Isaac dwelt in Gerar." This gives the keynote of Isaac's placid life. He was ever loyal to his settled abode. The story of his life is a splendid commentary on the importance of domestic ties. Today family life is less firmly rooted than in the past. Children easily break away from the moorings set up by their parents. The peril of this is plain.

And Isaac was willing not simply to accept his father's home, but his father's God too. He made no innovations in the field of religious thinking. He was content to accept the gospel of Abraham. There is surely much to be said for a man who is loyal to his father's faith. To be sure, we should ever be open-minded to new truth. But we need not exaggerate our zest for the novel. There is little wisdom in running after every new religion which turns up. Let us ever be mindful of the merit of Isaac's conservatism. The church has its old familiar walls, its beaten track, and it is good for us to drink and walk therein.
