COOKING GREEN VEGETABLES

Cooking green vegetable in a small amount of water, as short a time as possible, and with the cover off, is the recommendation of the New York College of Home Eco

Back of these three rules are good reasons. The main one is Green vegetables are cooked in unday. Dale Coats remained to soften the cellulose) because many of the vitamins and minerols for which they are valuated met with Mr. and Mrs. Roy able, dissolve in water. If a large court of water is used, some of Sunday. Dale Coats remained to a small amount of water (only it must be drained off before serv ing many of these valuable food stuffs are poured down the sink.

Timing is another important part of cooking green vegetables. tamin C in green vegetables is par-ticularly sensitive to heat. So too why spinach turns a drab brown when cooked for too long a time.

Cooking with the cover off also affects the color of the vegetables. Plant leaves particularly have cer-tain acids in them which are freed by heat. These acids when freed are "death" on green coloring mat-ter, destroying it quite quickly when they have a chance, as for example, when green leafy vegetables are cooked in a covered container. However, if the cover is never put on, the acids are carried off in the steam, and the bright green color of these vegetables is safe.

Uncle Ab says that the folks who always ask questions never seem to learn the answers.

From adhesive tape to wine, suggestions for removing all kinds of stains are given in Cornell bulletin E-356. Single copies of all Cornell bulletins are mailed free on request from the office of publication, Roberts Hall Ithaca, N. Y.
