New York Tightening Up On Out-of-State Milk

Albany, Sept. 26.—To prevent the shipping into New York State of milk produced on unsanitary dairy farms outside the State, the State Department of Health has put into operation a new system of dairy farm inspection, according to an announcement today by C. A. Holmquist, director of the division of sanitation of the department.

For the first time in the history of the department, out-of-state milk supplies are being given strict supervision at their source. Since July 1, a corps of 14 milk sanitarians, who will inspect some 18,000 farms and about 169 dairy plants shipping milk into the State, have been added to the Department's bureau of milk sanitation. General sanitary conditions on farms, as well as stables and equipment used in milk production, will be carefully examined. Two of the sanitarians, who are also veterinarians, will make physical examinations of herds as a check on the results obtained by the local veterinarian. About 2,300 dairy farms have been inspected to date.

Milk and cream shipped into this state for fluid consumption have been subject to the same standards as those for domestic supplies and local health officers have been responsible for seeing that foreign milk and cream met the prescribed requirements for many years.

This strict supervision of out-of-state milk supplies is required by law which provides for licensing by permit of milk shipped into this State. Permits are predicated on inspection of the sources of such milk to insure conformity with New York standards and sanitary requirements. The law became effective July 1.

THE HI HERALD

supposed to mention names, but how about C. B. being a little less flirtatious, and let's have more of M.T.B.

The Sophomores, yes the gracious Sophomores condescended to ask us about our lockers, or how we like Latin, or what we do in Guidance.

We have done our duties such as laughing at the antics of "Dizzy" Dean asking permission to go to the library, and making out passes properly.

We think we're going to enjoy high school, especially if the upper classmen ever get around to having their weiner roasts, so we can have ours.

HUMOR

Miss Cappuccilli: "George, your grammar is absurd. How can a man 'hatch out a plan'?"

George Joyce: "He might have his mind set on it."

Mr. Host: "I'll have to check up on the roll; Charlotte, where were you last night?"

Charlotte Cook: "What! ! ! " (blushing).

Mr. Host: "Where were you last night? Perhaps I'd better say at 3:30?"

Father: "Stop reaching across the table Leo; haven't you a tongue?"

Leo N.: "Yes, father; but my arm is longer."

Thelma Ahrens: "My dog is like one of the family."

M. Burgett: "Which one of the family is he like?"

Mother: "Now Richard, I told you not to practice on the piano until you washed your hands."

D. McAndrew: "I know, mother; but in my lessons this week I have to play only on the black keys."

Mr. Bretsch: "Name a liquid that won't freeze."

Louis F.: "Hot water."

Mr. McGee: "When I was a boy, I thought nothing of a ten-mile walk."

B. Dolan: "Well, I don't think much of it myself."

J. Saunders: "Will you take a walk with me?"

L. Nobles: "What for?"

Jack: "Om, my doctor told me to take my exercise with dumbbells."

A little boy was going to Sunday school for the first time. The teacher, wishing to make him feel at ease, asked him a question which she was sure he would know.

Teacher: "What is Heaven?"

Little Boy: "Dancing cheek-to-cheek."

LITTLE BITS OF HUMOR

Sandy MacTavish, shopping for collars: "Aw' what's the price on these two?"

Clerk: "The two for a quarter."

Sandy: "An' this one alone?"

Clerk: "Fifteen cents."

Sandy: "Weel, I'll tak' the other one."

Earmarked

"Am I good enough for you?" sighed the fond swain.

"No," said the girl candidly, "you are not; but you're too good for any other girl."

Kind to Her Kin

Having need of three cents, the mistress of the house went to the top of the back stairs. "Bessie," she called to the maid below, "Have you any coppers down there?"

"Yes'm—two," faltered Bessie—"but they're both my cousins, please, m'm."

Seasoned Spinster

Little Joy, seven years old, remarked as she helped herself to the last biscuit on the plate: "This won't matter to me, for I've been an old maid about all my life, anyhow."

Pass the Gaff

Father: "Daughter, isn't that young man rather fast?"

Daughter: "Yes, but I don't think he'll get away."

She Knew Her Neck

The barber had used his electric clippers in cutting small Betty's hair—"I guess my neck wasn't clean," she told her mother on coming home, "cause that man used his vacuum cleaner on it."

Costly Delusion

"My wife had a dream last night and thought she was married to a millionaire."

"You're lucky! My wife thinks that in the daytime."
