"Broadway Melodies of 1938" at Local Theatre

Covering a stage larger than any found in a New York musical theatre, production was filmed on the "Your Broadway and My Broadway" number from "Broadway Melody of 1938," co-starring Robert Taylor and Eleanor Powell, and showing at the Andover Theatre, Dec. 18-19.

Representing a futuristic New York scene, the set is said to surpass both the "Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," and the "Battlehip" numbers seen in "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Born to Dance," in size and brilliance.

More than a dozen futuristic buildings, which can be raised story by story to a height of 80 feet or lowered in the same manner by means of hydraulic pumps, hundreds of buses, automobiles and street cars all run by electricity, and dozens of brilliant neon signs comprise the main background of the set.

A 50-step stairway, constructed of glass, is one of the outstanding features of the set, while a series of skyscraper curtains disclose in sections the beauty and magnitude of the backgrounds.

It was designed by Cedric Gibbons, head art director, and his associate, Merrill Pye, who created the sets in "Ziegfeld" and "Born to Dance."

A subscription to the Andover News will be a gift each week for the entire year.
