THAT'S MODERN WAR

Modern war feeds upon the helpless. The women, children, aged, weak and sick, all who are unable to defend themselves against the terrifying unknown. But, after all, how can anyone defend himself against bombs that scatter death for a fourth of a mile about them? —That's modern war!

It used to be that men went forth to battle. They fought on open battle fields with shields and lances; every one of them fighting man to man, lustily, heartily, and the weak perished while the strong marched on. Oh, but that was long ago. Now men that call the wars repose in chairs, munching delicacies bought with money citizens thought was going for soldiers' rations. Once in a while they fake a shudder with the rest, wondering why the dogs don't hurry it up. It's costing more to add that little piece of land to the country than was figured. What a battle people will put up for their "liberty." It's a laugh, their "liberty."

Men in Caesar's time had no fear of death. Why? Because life flowed in an instant when a sword pierced the heart. Instead, today, but no one can hope to describe the unequalled terror in a mother's eyes as she sees her child shot down; the numb horror in a young wife's face as a bomb explodes three feet from her husband. One wonders what it all leads to, what purpose the Almighty has. To watch a soldier pray for death leaves a mute sensation in the region of your heart. That's modern war!

Democracy has not won one battle since the World War, while the "isms" have marched triumphantly on. Witness the sickening struggles of China, Ethiopia and Spain. It can be said that they have not won these battles by honorable methods but, what counts, they have won them. Might has blotted out right ever since democracy's supreme effort in 1914.—That's modern war! —Betty Jo Ludden

A Bit of Green

Your neighbors may come From the Emerald Isle,
Let's all wear a bit of green.
He's homesick perhaps For his old domicile—
Let's all wear a bit of green!
Saint Patrick it was Who started the style,
Let's all wear a bit of green!
For the Irish a cheer,
For the Shamrock a smile—
Let's all wear a bit of green!

Andover Upsets Arkport

Last Thursday night the Andover boys forged an easy win over Arkport, the Steuben winners of class C in their section on the university court at Alfred. The game was scheduled as a preliminary for the Class A play-offs between Corning Free Academy and Bolivar. Andover and Arkport were expected to play a close game, as the Arkport five had howled to only one team previously. Savona knocked off Arkport to get in the play-offs at Alfred last Wednesday evening.

Each team in the first quarter kept a tight defense, holding each other to six points.

In the second quarter Andover took advantage of the long court and by fast breaks were able to tally 15 points to Arkport's four, putting Andover in the lead at the half by a score of 10 to 21.

In the third quarter Andover's offensive was still clicking, and the boys lengthened the gap to insure a safe lead, ending the quarter with a score of 17-35.

The last quarter Andover suffered under Arkport's foul shots, and the game ended with the final score 28-38.

The Purple and White turned in their best exhibition of the season, using their speed to good advantage on the large court. The scoring was well divided. The defense was better than it had been at any time in the year.

Witty French Conversations Held

The French I class divided in groups of two and held humorous French conversations last Thursday in class.

Among other news that was revealed by the conversationalists, it was learned that Patricia Lynch was about to go to a soiree with Premier Daladier's son, no less. Some of the topics followed: Between Eleanor Northrup and Kathleen Howland was a conversation in a taxi en route to the city to buy a dress; between Betty Ludden and Patricia Lynch, a rather jealous conversation about boy friends; between Sophie Kohut and Irene Lynch a quarrel over a doll; Victor Oakes and Paul Ryan acted the part of baseball manager and player respectively, and Mary Padden and Catherine Perry had a sisterly quarrel. All the conversations were very good.

Class Writes to Gregg Pals

The members of the shorthand I class have joined a student letter exchange. From this exchange each student will receive names of shorthand students in other schools both in this and foreign countries.

From this corresponding with other schools the class believes to gain much knowledge about foreign countries.

Besides learning new points about the different countries the pupils will improve their shorthand by writing all their letters in shorthand. Each student chose three countries that he would like to correspond with. Most of them chose two foreign countries and the United States. Some of the countries the pupils hope to hear from are: Australia, Philippine Islands, Chile, Ireland, China, Switzerland, Mexico, Germany, Holland, France, Hawaii, England and New Zealand.

The shorthand class believes this correspondence will be interesting, educational and helpful in shorthand.

Construct Dutch House

The second graders constructed a paper Dutch house last week as a final project for their study of Holland.

The outside of the house was made from brown wrapping paper with flowers by the front door. Inside can be found a little Dutch boy and a little Dutch girl cut out and painted in gay colors by the pupils. John Connor and Ernestine Witter acted as patterns for the inhabitants of the house. Rosemary Mead loaned a small table for the house.

The reporter also found some original writings on Holland in booklet form. Parts of stories found in this booklet follow:

"The cheese market has many cheeses," Clarence Davis.
"The Dutch men go to market to sell things they raise in Holland, and people get money," Glenn Cooper.

Varsity Finishes Season

The Andover Purple and White basketball team drew their season to a close last Thursday night with a victory over Arkport.

Looking back, it can be safely said that the team has completed a successful season with a total of eleven games won from a total of 15 starts.

The team, however, did have its faults. The chief fault was its missing easy shots from under the basket. Poor foul shooting also meant the loss of more than one game. If these defects could have been overcome, it is believed that the team would have easily marched to the playoffs in Rochester.

The boys opened the season with a series of eight straight wins. Among its victims were teams such as Canisteo, class B champions in Allegany and Steuben county; Hornell, Cuba and Arkport. The purple and white fell only under the attacks of Richburg and Angelica. Four games were lost to these teams three of which were uncomfortably close and which provided an unusual amount of excitement.

The team easily outscored its opponents in the totals. The addition of points scored reveals the fact that Andover scored 422 points to the opponents' 302. George Joyce led the individual scoring with 125 points. Briggs followed with 62 and Saunders and Oakes were third and fourth respectively.

Following is the scoring:

L. Nobles led the scoring with 27 points. McAndrew and Dean ranked second and third respectively. The team scored a total of 145 points to their opponents 88. Following is a summary of second team scores:

Around A. H. S. With C. Coryell

Even three days before St. Patrick's Day, Leo and Charlie were wearing green. Leo's new two-tone sweater is getting a great deal of attention.

We're all glad that Charlie Spier is back again. I guess no one envies him for the work he should make up. Now Charlie has an excuse to be lazy.

"Where was Moses when the lights went out?" Most of the teachers found that "lights out" was the excuse offered for work not done.

Two people of the Sophomore class are going to be chosen as king and queen of their Saint Patrick's party. I wonder who they'll be?

Too bad the boys couldn't have broken the "jinx" a little earlier in the league season instead of during these extra games.

"Could be" that all Charlie had to do while sick was to grow a mustache?

Jack Saunders always has a nice looking audience during fifth period study hall. So does Paul Ryan!

Why does everyone enjoy gum so much?

Basketball intramurals are over now and shuffleboard, ping pong, etc., have started.

The Latin Class has "flash cards" which help them to learn vocabulary.

The spelling contest in Hi Herald class between the Hi Herald and Andover News taught the class how to spell "adolescence" and "aesthetic" along with a few easier words.

The Homemaking class will soon have some well-planned kitchens to display.

The English IV class doesn't like to have tests every other day on the "Tale of Two Cities," altho they do like the novel.

Work for the exhibit has already started.

We've started third act now so there will be time for a good polishing of "Nora Nobody."

By the way, what is Nora's last name? Eventually she will have three last names.

The ice on the trees is artistic at least.

Wine seems to be the favorite color among us students.

It's good to see more on the honor roll. The more the merrier.

It seems to take longer to get the report cards back this time.

Pat has a pretty good slang as a waitress.

Who's a dumb bellhop? Not Bud Dolan, of all people!

I should think Mrs. McQueen would get very hungry. She does threaten to eat a dog.

Louis F. is bashful. No foolin', he doesn't like to have Miss Cappuccilli watch him.

Believe it or not, some of the teachers are just learning to "sew a fine seam."

Blackfriars Attend Grange Meeting

On Wednesday evening, March 15, the dramatic club of Andover High School was invited to a Grange meeting held in their hall. The subject was "Youth" and the "Cost of Education."

The program was an impromptu reading by Miss Cappuccilli, a poem by Jane Burdick, and a poem by Kathleen Howland. Coraetha Mead and Jean Northrup under the supervision of Miss Wood demonstrated how a sweater should be washed. A game was played with all the members on two teams. These teams were captained by Marion Burger and Thelma Ahrens. Each team had to sing an Irish song, make two pigs and act out a
