Solving the Housing Problem

ERTAIN things seem to be true about the muchhigh proportion of homes are out-of-date and should be replaced with new buildings.

One of the best things the present Administration has done has been to set up the Federal Housing Administration system of guaranteed mortgages, which doubt. encourages private capital to lend on long terms at low; interest for home building.

We are not at all sure, however, that the grandiferous program of subsidized suburban or city aparttions whereby the Federal Government practically pays 1 the whole cost, is equally commendable.

\ system which encourages capitalists to invest run, more truly in accord with the American tradition he must keep his life on its course, even tho at times of individual self-reliance.

It is gratifying to note that several private investors are putting their idle capital into the building of courage will win thru these days that are trying vou." of homes for ordinary people of moderate means. The men's souls.—Goshen Democrat. most notable of these is Edsel Ford, who has announced that he is about to build a large number of small houses to be sold on easy terms to people in the $20-$25 a week Man's Greatest Weakness

In northwestern Indiana, between the prosperous manufacturing cities of Gary and Hammond, another capitalist, Frank Hoess, is building houses, each on an acre of ground, on a system which enables a man wit a job to buy his houes with almost no down payment, and his monthly payments are graded to his pay-check.
