having a history lesson on Egypt. Looking about the room we find a poster entitled "Sail Away With Books." We have not much time left so we hurring on to Miss Jordan's room to find them just at the close of a spelling lesson. The announcement is made that Mr. Giffin is absent and there will be no music lesson. One of the pupils suggests that they have drawing class, which Miss Jordan vetoes until later. Instead, history class begins and a review is made of the Crusades.

Leaving the class engrossed in history, we travel on to Miss Baker's room where she is reading from "The Wizard of Oz," and receiving the rapt attention of her pupils.

Upon leaving the Wizard and his adventures, we find ourselves at the seventh grade where a quiet class is taking social studies and some of the pupils are locating places on small maps. Our last stop, Mr. McKibben's, finds us amid a group of boys who are receiving instructions for making gifts.

Hi Herald Holds Mass Meeting

Last Thursday, Nov. 9, under the direction of the editor, the first mass meeting of the staff met in Room C to discuss some points about the Hi Herald.

As an experiment, the staff is working with duplicate assignments in order that competition and punctuality will be aroused.

This will give every member an assignment and will show just how eager he is to work for the Hi Herald. Those reporters who do their assignments well and get it in on time, will be called "active members." Those who do an assignment haphazardly and are slow in handing it in will be called "passive members." These reporters must strive for better work or they will automatically dropped from the staff.

In getting grade news, the reporters are going to interview grade children in addition to getting facts from the teachers.

Among other points stressed were accuracy, neatness and technique. The remainder of the meeting was given over to answering any problems that reporters had.

Previews of Coming Attraction in A.C.S.

The Junior play cast will present skits of the "Ready Made Family" in assembly Friday. John Lynch will introduce the characters and a few short scenes will be acted out. This play will be presented Tuesday, November 21 at 8:15.

If you are present at the play you will see:

Ethel Crowner as a smart widow; Lyle Ordway as a boy with fits; Betty Jo Ludden as a constant lady talker;

Mary Mesler as an irritated old maid; Kenneth Gath as a widower with children;

Eleanor Northrup in one of her best roles as a spoiled brat; Anna Hardy as a scheming young lady;

Roland Shaff in an insane moment; Kathleen Howland and John Ahrens in colored roles as cook and handy man respectively;

And lastly you will meet the much-talked of Horatio. The townspeople are invited to attend the skits.

Library Corner . . .

LIBRARY "FINDS"

As we all know, this week is Book Week. There are several new books in our school library and the students should take advantage of them during this week.

While scouting around the library, I chanced upon a book with the extraordinary title of "Gentlemen Aren't Sissies." Satisfying my curiosity about such an unusual title, I sat down to read a few pages. The general idea of the whole book is to tell boys how to attract girls and how to make a favorable impression. It is very humorous and the ideas conveyed in it will be helpful to girls as well as boys.

Other new books which sound very interesting are:

"T-Model Tommy," "The Last of the Gauchos," "Our G-Men," "Private Props," "Sylvia, Inc.," "Songs of Years," "Six-Man Football," and "I Wanted Wings."

"I Wanted Wings" is the true story of the making of a flier. The author took training as a flying cadet at Randolph and Kelly field, Texas. There he learned what it took to make a service flier, what it was like to crash—in short, the laughs, the sweat, the thrills, and the tragedy that go to make up the greatest adventure left to a young man in peace time.

In addition to these books, I have also noticed the new "Life" magazines. This magazine is truly a great one and the illustrations in it are both humorous and educational.

New books have also been purchased for the grade children. Among them are "Hobby Horse

Hill" and Walt Disney's "Pinocchio."

Now that we have quite a large assortment of books, I hope that during this week and the weeks to come many of you will find hours of pleasure in reading.

English Class Plays Bingo

Sounds of "one winner your choice and two winners our choice" were heard in the English II class Tuesday when the class played bingo.

The game was played with the numbers replaced by parts of a sentence. The object of the game was to detect five parts of the sentence written on the card. The prizes for a bingo is a candy bar.

Dog Turns Scholarly

Last week another dog made his way thru the halls of A. C. S. This is the third canine that has entered the building. For some unknown reason, the Junior homeroom must extend a more cordial invitation than other homerooms for theirs seems to be the destination of all the animals.
