HAPPY NEW YEAR, STUDENTS OF A. C. S.!

During the last few weeks, we have been bubbling over with the "Christmas Spirit" (as we call it). Our very smile in the hall has echoed the words "Merry Christmas! Happy New Year!" Life suddenly seemed rich-full when we tore November off the calendar and substituted December. Pet hates atmost deserted us. most deserted us. Now we are all again back at library.

January exams are just around the corner.

-S.R. Now we are all again back at school. Christmas carols are no longer sung in our halls. Decorations have been torn down-lights with all their color are no more. Christmas has come and gone, but still we wish our readers a "Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

Hoping that if we reiterate these phrases after the season has passed—that the spirit of the December month will remain with our faculty and students in Ardover through Homemaking Interviews Marjory Davis

If I could run merrily about the house when the people are away I would try my best to warn them and tell them that they'd better scamper or the large black cat will catch them. But no, I must tick on and on, and tell only the time.

On Christmas I see the hidden presents all night and the happy children in the morning. Oh! I could tell them it wasn't the imaginary nerson whem they believe in that has filled their stockings; but that would spoil everything. I'm glad that once I can tick and see the fun on Christmas morn.

At my tolling hour of midnight, I hear about me a great clamor; this is New Year's. The horns blow; the pans bang and the family is very lively. There are sisters with their remeds and brothers with their reflect attendance, Elizabeth Hall.

Gettin' Around -

It has been requested of this col-umn to get more news, but just how do you go about getting news when here's none to get. So far I've heard of three

New Year's Eve parties: Lyle Ordway's, Betty Jo's and Barbara Temple's. Lyle escotted Nanny (maybe lit's the new Buick), Betty Jo's lasted longest and Barbara's guests went to the midnight show.

Lee skating is becoming more popular. That type of party is seldom had around here (maybe because students are afraid Mr. McGee will outshine them far too much.)
