game for slugging, and should be praised for his sportsmanship? No, I don't think so.

Canisteo lost to Addison Friday night in a game marked by a general fight, joined in by players and spectators alike. We are thankful our coach and players prevented that in Wellsville after the slugging episode.

We were losing players so fast via the foul route that George Greenan had to go in and change his shoes in the last quarter at Wellsville in order to be ready to play. Where did Farnsworth find the referee for the Wellsville game?

The Whitesville gym hasn't been enlarged, but they have provided bleachers for the spectators in a balcony, so that the onlookers are kept off the floor.

The six years Coach McGee has been here Andover has been victorious seven out of the ten games with Wellsville.

Wellsville shouldn't have gotten mad because Andover was winning. They ought to be used to getting beat by Andover since we have won seven out of ten games in the last six years.

I read in the paper that Hornell defeated Corning Northside 52-37, to take second place in their league.

Corning Free Academy defeated Painted Post 32-21.

Our next game is with Allentown one week from next Friday, 19th at Andover.

Cub Reporters Interview Mrs. Joyce

Taking care of one baby seems as much work as teaching 35 pupils, according to reports from Mrs. Louis Joyce, when interviewed by her former pupils, Dorothy Baker and Doris Mead, when she attended the marionette show Tuesday morning. It seems her son gets his way a lot more than the pupils ever did.

Altho Mrs. Joyce misses teaching and the companionship of the teachers and pupils, she still enjoys housekeeping.

When asked how she thought pupils could get grade news better, Mrs. Joyce thought that by visiting the rooms one could get as much as by interviewing.

Reading seems Mrs. Joyce's favorite recreation in her spare time. The organizing of the Student Council and the "detention period" both seemed excellent ideas to Mrs. Joyce.

Mrs. Joyce takes particular interest in reading the Hi Herald thoroly and wants to congratulate the staff for their excellent work this year.

Jots on Journalism

I wonder how many people ever stop to think where the news comes from that they see in their daily newspaper? Of course, they know that there are reporters in the newspaper business, but they could not begin to know what a "tough" but thrilling life the reporter leads. The reporter risks his life many times a day to get a news story. He may have to get up in the middle of the night to get the story of a large fire for his newspaper. He has to have a nose for news and a sense of news values which will enable him to see stories which others pass by. Getting a "scoop" for a newspaper means a lot, not only to the newspaper but to the reporter.

Every large newspaper has many correspondents in foreign countries who gather news about the war situations. Many of them are in the warring countries today, sending news to their respective newspapers, enabling the American public to know what is happening abroad.

Everyone has noticed that in newspaper write-ups, the five "W's" and the "h" are used in the first paragraph. "Who, what, where, when, why and how." Having all items of importance in the first paragraph enables the reader, who has a limited time for reading a newspaper, to get a clear, concise picture of what has happened.

Many reporters of today's largest selling newspapers received their start by having first written for their school papers.

Only now they can not afford to hand in late assignments to their editors as they did in high school days. If they were to have their editor nag at them for not having handed in an assignment, I am sure they would be minus a newspaper job. I think high school reporters should take a tip from famous reporters—"Always try to get your assignment in first!" —K.K.
