Waftings From WANDERING WILLIE

WITH the snow still deep in the fields and woods, and with a hard crust forming that even the deer find doggone hard to break thru in order to get at their feed, one can easily comprehend what is going to happen to the smaller game and birds in this vicinity before the snow is gone.

While talking to one of our local trappers, Carl "Mike" Honegger to be exact, he says that he has been taking a little food out on the trap line with him when he goes, and distributes it along the way. Just about as fast as he throws it down along comes anything from a pheasant to a skunk and gobbles it up.

"Mike" suggested that the local Boy Scouts and Rod and Gun Club members gather all available table scraps, dry bread, etc., from their homes and restaurants, and the meat scraps from the various stores and markets in Andover and distribute them, along with any other available food that they can get their hands on.

The State and the Gun Clubs have gone to much expense and work to stock the fields and woods with small game and birds, and it would seem to us a abject pity to let all this come to naught by neglecting to take care of this situation now. And the work should start now as the hay seeds that the birds are faring on now, and which are few, will not last very long.

COMMISSION Boyd is receiving many a silent pat on the back for the work he has been doing in our burg, especially from the local firemen.

While other towns and villages had their Boy Scouts and village workers begin to dig out the fire hydrants in their respective villages as one of the last jobs after clearing away the snow, Fay was just about three jumps ahead of them and within two days after the big storm he had every hydrant in Andover clear of snow and ready to hook a pumper in case of need.

NOW to get back to our subject of last week about "Jett's" horse. From what we have seen and heard since the snow, that horse should be a permanent city worker here. In the village ordinances each owner is supposed to clean his walks within 12 hours after a snow storm, but the many folks who never did and never will clean their walks makes it necessary for the city dads to clear the walks of snow so that the smaller children can get to school and back without having to walk in the road.

The small force of workers employed by the village of Andover would have to work night and day until some time in August to get all the streets clear of snow. If all the property owners, and we mean all, would see that their walks are cleaned thoroly now, so that a child going to school or back does not have to walk in the road part of the way when he comes to an uncleaned stretch, it would reduce the danger of that child being struck by a car.

THE following comes out of the ever-famous "Chicken Hollow" and speaks for itself:

I see by the News that Willie was worried about Chicken Hollow during the big snow storm. To tell the truth, we were worried ourselves. We had the worst fall of snow in the history of Chicken Hollow. Some of the old timers claim it was worse than the blizzard of '88.

We wouldn't have been able to get out of the Hollow by next spring if "Pete" Howland hadn't cleared the road with the town's big plow—and most of the sidewalks haven't been found yet.

On the day of the storm, I (Earl Kemp) started for the village. I was floundering around in the mountainous drifts when my foot touched something hard. I scuffed the snow away and doggone if there wasn't the top of one of the neighbor's chimneys.
