EX-OFFICERS OF HI HERALD DESERVE THE BEST

There is perhaps no better way to discover "just what stuff pupils are made of" than by working with them week in and week out on such an activity as the weekly school paper. Many students could begin well; many could end well; but it takes "grit" to meet a newspaper deadline every single Wednesday throughout the year. The basketball and baseball seasons are strenuous, but they end. The Hi Herald season never ends, nor does it have a cheering section.

Betty A. Greene and Bernadine Briggs and many of the staff needed no cheering section. They have met me every week with the grim determination to make the Andover Central School paper a success. They have worked independently of their adviser when it was necessary. I feel sure Mr. McGee found Billy Dugan, sports editor, just as dependable.

Before we enter our grand, new building, I want to thank these people and others whom I haven't mentioned, for their loyalty—and for their help in giving our old school spirit. May they get only the best from life!

AU REVOIR, MR. GIFFIN

This year the musical organizations of Andover Central School have taken a great leap toward success. It is quite true that there is only one person who is responsible for this wonderful work—Mr. Giffin. After the wonderful time that the band, orchestra and chorus have had this year, they were all looking forward to next year which promised to be far more exciting.

Mr. Giffin, altho he is leaving, will be in the memories of several for being the first man music instructor, the first to start a band, the first to put on a successful operetta from the music organizations and the first to take an organization to the sectional music festival.

Anyone who has ever worked in one of the music organizations this year will understand what a great loss it is going to be without him next year. Of course there will be another instructor, but it will be rather hard to forget Mr. Giffin and all of the good times that he and the music students spent together.

We all hope that he has lots of luck, and want him to know that Andover will always welcome a visit from him when the insurance business gets dull.

WE'LL MISS THEM

Miss Mary Wood, homemaking teacher for Andover since that course was installed will not be teaching here next year. She has a fine new position elsewhere. Miss Wood will be very greatly missed in that play cast members will have no one to call upon in an emergency next year as they did this year. We wish her much success in the future.

Mrs. Ball also is not returning to continue her teaching in the lower grades. We haven't seen Mrs. Ball up in high school very much, but we know she gave the Juniors an idea for favors for the Junior Prom.

Uncle Ab says the kinds of things you see depend mainly on how you look at them.

To Our New School

It's all finished now—beautiful, breath-taking, splendid. A grand new red brick building, trimmed with white pillars, set in a deep green lawn with stately mature pine trees at its front. Our new school! You've had so many pieces of advice—don't do this, please do that—there isn't much left to say. And anyway, I don't believe you need it. When a pupil or teacher sees the grand Andover Central School, he knows enough to respect and admire it; and has a right to feel insulted should anyone think he needs to be told how to take care of it. Be sure to be there when the first students graduate from within its glowing frame.

Hi Herald Co-Editors to Edit

A Hi Herald staff meeting was called last Friday noon by Betty A. Greene, editor, for the purpose of electing the editor and business manager for the next year. An unforeseen complication arose when the tellers discovered there was a tie between two girls, Betty Jo Ludden and Anna Hardy for editorship. It was decided to set up a dual editorship for the coming year. This is an entirely new policy, but the present officers and their advisers feel certain if the two girls work together the Hi Herald will shout doubly hard the activities of the students in the new Andover Central School.

Regina Richardson was elected to the position of business manager. The three girls have had extensive training and experience in Hi Herald work. All are eager to make the Andover paper the mouthpiece of the school.

Letters Given Out

Last Friday morning in assembly letters were given out to the boys on the track and baseball teams who had earned them during the sport season. Since the letters had not arrived yet, only the certificates were handed out.

The baseball letters were presented by Mr. Holmes and were given to Paul Ryan, John Dean, Kenneth Gath, Dick McAndrew, Bud Dolan, Wilbur Lehman, Harold Rice, Don Lynch, George Greenan and Louis Dodge, manager.

Mr. McGee then awarded letters to the following men on the track team: Dick McAndrew, Vince McAndrew, Ernest Burdick, Leslie Brundage, Ardean Matison and Victor Oakes.

Few letters were given for track this year because this was Andover's first track team in three years.

Letters were also given to the following girls who earned them on the point system:

Regina Richardson, Irene Lynch, Betty Jo Ludden, Wanda Dolan, Elaine Pope, Doris Mead, Anna Hardy, Ethel Crowner, Marilyn Hardy, Kaliepy Karcanes, Eleanor Northrup, Letha Callaghan, Betty Greene and Bernadine Briggs.

Pictures Finally Arrive

The long awaited pictures of Andover's first and second teams, and those of the cheerleaders have finally made their arrival. All three sets are grand and greatly improved over last year's. Anyone desiring a picture can order one from Mr. McGee for 50 cents.

What of Our Old School?

Now that we students of Andover Central School have received a new school building, what is going to happen to the old building? There have been rumors that the old building was going to be changed into a garage for the buses. Why should this be done when the buses already have a garage? Why shouldn't the building be left just as it is and be purchased by the town? If the old building were bought by the town, the gym could be used by the town basketball team. The stage could be used for shows such as the firemen or other organizations present. The old building could be turned into a recreational hall for both the young and the old of Andover. If the town did buy the old building it would stop all conflicts between town and school activities. The old school building as a recreational place would help to keep the children off the streets.

With all these advantages in mind, if the town purchased the old school there is also the possibility of having the town offices upstairs. Maybe it is not possible for the town to buy the old school building because of some agreement which has already settled what disposal will be made of it.

However, if there is no such agreement, we as students of Andover Central School, would appreciate it if the townspeople would consider its purchase. We believe we could make even a better spirit in our town if we and our parents could enjoy fun together. —A.R.T.

Steuben Leads in Conservation Program

Steuben county leads in this year's Agricultural Conservation program in New York State with 3,276 enrollments.

The total enrollment this year is 76,434, which is the largest since the program was started in 1936.

equal to that made to a union free school of the same size with added quotas due the individual districts as tho they had not entered the centralization. Also the State provides one-half the cost of transportation and one-fourth of the building costs. Recent Federal aid thru P. W. A. has paid 45 per cent of the building and equipment costs of all approved projects. All of these aids were available in the erection and equipment of our own Andover Centralization. There are now 269 central schools in New York State.

In our own centralization ten rural districts have joined with the union free school district of our village in the erection of this beautiful building, its complete equipment and the landscaping of its grounds as a place of beauty and recreation. Here the student can study Latin and the other conventional subjects, but he also has the privilege of taking music, shop work, commercial subjects, agriculture, homemaking and joining the band or orchestra. Here the student will have the privileged duty of studying citizenship, American history and patriotism. Here the pupil population is large enough so that each student should learn to think freely and fearlessly and to express himself in a crowd and to co-operate with his fellows. In a word we have builded an educational institution here that we hope will so fully meet the educational needs of the students that they will be filled with deep loyalty and respect for the school and the wise and democratic spirit that has made it possible.

Realizing that unemployment is due in part to a lack of training, our central school will offer vocational guidance and vocational training in the courses mentioned above. This part of our curriculum is most likely to be expanded in the future with also the possibility of added facilities and courses for adult education. The most important product of any nation, state or community is its youth. Necessary as it is to give them an education and a chance for employment, it is also essential to provide for their safety and health and to give them facilities for recreation.

These our central school will provide with its coach and physical director, its gymnasium and physical correction room, its school nurse, play ground, athletic field and beautiful library with its books and magazines.

And so, may the students of our central schools—the schools that represent New York State's latest gift to its youth—in loyal thought and action say—

"We acknowledge our Inheritance From the Past, Our Privileges of the Present; We promise to transmit them unblemished to the Future."
