Earlier in the season Bill told us that he had the best crop of oats in this section, claiming that he had to park 1,337 shocks out in the meadow across from his oats patch in order to shock the rest of it up. He also claimed that the oats grew so high near three apple trees that they shadowed the trees sufficiently to kill them before he could get the crop cut. But we sort of took it all with a grain of salt and said nothing. Then this week Bill cut his corn crop and began remarking about the corn being fairly high. He looked around while telling about it to find something high enough to judge it by while talking but could see nothing with enough altitude. We reckoned we'd like to see the corn, and doggone if he didn't take us up—he had two of his little stalks out in the garage and don't take Bill's word for it, but our's, that corn was 12 feet five inches high and measured five inches in circumference.

If any of you local farmers think you can beat that corn for height and circumference just stick a stalk of it in your pocket and bring it down. Personally, from the gleam Bill had in his optics he has set himself a record.

YOUNGSTERS in the village are heading for trouble again, according to word around the postoffice. The latest fad of these young men is to tear down Government bulletins and Government posters and string them all around the place. If you bright little boys, and many of you

We understand that destroying or wilfully damaging property of the Federal Government is much more serious than swiping peanuts.

And while we're talking about the younger generation, you fellows under 16 who are not connected with the Rod and Gun Club better stay out of the club rooms and find some other place to raise Cain—'cause there's liable to be one of the Club boys drop in who is over 16 and you will be out on your . . . nose.

That's the way we are doing in Chicken Hollow.

town and brought home a newspaper, the first one in months. We all read it thoroly. They seem to be putting on a pretty good war in Europe, and one person seems to be writing the news for both sides, it looks so near alike.

We see the political season is on, such as speeches and rallies and such. We can't see any sense of either party putting on one of these big gatherings and a speaker from the same party giving the talk. The people know before they go what they're going to hear and the speaker knows his hunch is voting his way. If we got to have these rallies why not get a speaker from the other party? That way the public would get a fair idea of what is going on. Then they could go home and discount it 90 per cent, and on election day vote as you please.

That's the way we are doing in Chicken Hollow.
