ing to imitate various birds to entertain us with. In reality it had something to do with the radio system.

The encyclopedias have been in wide use lately, particularly by the Seniors who are doing activities for their biography unit.

The new books have been in steady demand, both the fiction and the non-fiction.

Members of the Library Council are planning to go in groups to entertain the first eight grades in some way next week, since it will be Book Week. They will do bulletin boards, conduct tours in the school library, etc., under the assistance of the teachers.

The Progressives believe in advertising by the signs on one of the bulletin boards.

I think that some of the students also a few teachers, should be conducted on a tour around the library to discover where certain books are located. Their looks of bewilderment shows this when searching for one particular title of book. MJM

Freshmen Frolics

We notice Onnalee Mullen has it bad. A Junior at that—Louie Sherwood.

In French I class we are learning vocabulary by flash cards. Quite an idea, Miss Barrett.

Too bad, Anne and Marian S. had to change their seats in study hall. Three students from the Freshman class made political speeches in Social Science class.

Why do Charles H. and J. R. always trade seats with someone in study hall? Restless, boys? A good cure is study.

After having a vote in the Social Science class, we found that Wilkie won 19 to 9.

We Freshmen took a walk down town in the cold, cold rain Tuesday morning. What for? Well, we were supposed to go to the town hall and vote but something went wrong. Well we got some fresh air anyhow.

Miss Snyder threatened to scream when a Freshman showed her a rubber mouse.

Let's have something besides little rubber mice next week for the news. AMR

Second Graders Bake Gingerbread Boys

Once there was a second grade who made gingerbread boys. They went to the Homemaking room and set the oven at 350 degrees. While waiting for the oven to warm, Marcella Smith and Clyde Jackson read stories about cookies. After the oven was warm Robert Ordway and Alice Burgess put two trays of gingerbread boys in the oven and while waiting for them to bake Gerald Schoonover, Lee Lindenmuth, Billy Glover and John Doughterty read more stories about cookies. After 15 minutes had passed the pupils took the gingerbread boys out of the oven and took them to the second grade home-room. After the gingerbread boys were cool the pupils had a very enjoyable time eating them and drinking milk. MEB

Cold Weather Doesn't Stop Explorers

"Br-r-r it's cold! Honest, my hands are just numb! Are you coming, Jean? Hurry and build a fire, Mr. Maloy."

These were some of the "sayings" that were said by four explorers on their biology field trip last Saturday morning.

In spite of the cold weather, Jean Button, Doris Mead, Dorothy Baker and Marilyn Hardy, along with Mr. Maloy ventured forth to what is called the Porcupine Den near Quigg Hollow. After their long cold twisting and turning hike to find this long-sought spot, the party woke up to the fact that the porcupine was asleep for the winter, so they saw the remains of his home which was very interesting.

Next the explorers motored to the Beaver Dam at Reville and later on in the afternoon they looked for fossils in the valley near Edward Green's at Tip Top.

The little party came to a close in the middle of the afternoon as they journeyed homeward after a cold but enjoyable afternoon. MJH
