Comments on the Presidential Election

"Great minds run in the same channel" or do they? It doesn't seem to be the case in Andover. Here are a few comments "off the record" on the last presidential election. Betty Halsey: "Magnificent! The people got what they wanted." June Glover: "It has to be all right." Florence Mings: "I don't think much of it." Violet Barney: "Least of my troubles." Cecelia Lynch: "Very pleased." Virginia Rice: "I'm not a Democrat, but I think with the war and all, Roosevelt was a better candidate as he knew the in's and out's of the office." O. Greene: "Could have been better. I lost a bet on it." K. Howland: "Good." I. Franklin: "Turned out just the way it should have." J. Beihl: "I didn't care." L. Freeland: "I think Willie should have got it." E. Pope: "Roosevelt would have to get it, (damn it)." Teachers Are Neutral: Mr. Maloy: "The majority of the people got what they wanted, proving we are still a democracy." Miss Barrett: "There's not much I can do about it, is there?" Miss Larkin: "I'm interested in what is going to happen next." Mr. Lynch: "It shattered a part of our unwritten constitution." Mrs. VanOxx: "If we all co-operate with the President we shall succeed." Mr. McGee: "The American people showed an unwillingness to change presidents in the national crisis."
