NIME REPORTED IN THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERTY

PRINCE OF PEACE?

Reprinted from the Audorea News, Dec. 21, 1917

And He said, "I came not to bring peace, but a

What a strange contradiction, and how shall we reconcile it?

Again the season is with us when the hearts of Christendom turn to the wonderful Personality and dwell with feelings of awe and wonder on the words that fell from His lips.

Again we commemorate the birth of Him who shall make us free indeed. But now we come with hearts bowed down under a world sorrow and minds clouded by a veil thru which it would seem impossible to pierce. When we would sing acclaim to the Prince of Peace, we look out over a world drenched in war and blood. We see on every hand misery and suffering, human conditions which He gave His life to alleviate. And it has been so long since He made the sacrifice that hope almost turns to despair.

Can we, by any means, glean one ray of comfort from that cryptic remark which we quote above? Was the omniscient mind projecting itself into the future and seeing the mighty struggles thru which His word must adventure e're it reached enthronement in the hearts of mankind.

We cannot but believe that such was the case. Too well He knew the awful depravity of the heart of man; too well He knew the fearful-test of pride and power against which men must battle and under which they must be ground to powder; too well He knew by what slow degrees the world would be brought to a realization of the fact that but one human attribute can ever be taken into the Great Beyond---Love.

It was said of Him that "He was in the world and the world knew Him not." If the world then knew Him not, how much shall it know His teachings without diligent study and search?

It would be well for the American people, as they approach the anniversary of the Messianic Birth, to again fortify themselves with the teachings of the Son of Man. We should look into the national heart and see that in the momentous conflict before us we harbor no unworthy motive by which we may help defer the consummation of His benediction, — "Peace on Earth, Good Will to Men." It would be well that we again assure our own hearts that we desire but the everlasting Right and Truth.

Having, then, assured our hearts of these things, let us revert to just one incident in His_life. Let us recall that when He found the temple of God profaned, with a scourge of cords he drove the profaners from its precincts.

Wonderful man! For His own safety He would not contend, but for the honor of His Father, yes!

Was it a divine pointing of the way for His followers all down the ages? Surely it could not have been a trivial incident of no particular significance to man. Such incidents had no place in His life.

Assured, then, that peace-loving, mercy-loving, truth-loving America has but one aim—the preserving of the sanctity of the Father's temple—that temple which is the great heart of humanity—we can approach this busy season with hearts attuned to its significance—the anniversary of the earthly advent of the Prince of Peace. Coming in this spirit we, like the shepherds of old, on the Judean hills, may catch a glimpse of that light that shall dispel the darkness of ignorance and averice and shall make of all men followers and champions of Right.

And as we greet the day let it be with hearts that can feel for all people everywhere. Let it be with a fervent hope that soon the clouds that now encompass us may be lifted and dispersed, and the beneficient sun of world-wide righteousness may shine thenceforth forever. Let it be with a faith that the eternal principles of justice and right for which we stand will ultimately rule the earth, and man see his fellow man for what he is-HIS BROTHER!
