Everyone is glad to see "All Fool's Day" arrive, for March has been the stormiest and most disagreeable month of the winter.

Most farmers are busy in maple sugar bushes now, but deep snow in the woods has bothered some about tapping.

An operation was found necessary for gallstones from which she failed to rally. She was 64 years of age, the daughter of Loren and Elsie Watkins Ingley and widow of Bert E. Heselton who died very suddenly in June of 1939.

She is survived by her only child, Mrs. Howard Barney of Whitesville with whom she lived, one sister, Mrs. Dow Scribner of Whitesville, one nephew, Alton Scribner also of Whitesville and other relatives and a host of friends.

Funeral services were held in the late home Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock with burial in Rural cemetery beside her husband. The Rev. C. E. Swearingen of Westfield, Pa., officiated, assisted by the Rev. Harold E. Blish, pastor of the Methodist church here. The house was filled to capacity and the great abundance of floral gifts was gorgeous. She will be missed by a host of friends to many of whom she has been for years a benefactress.

Senior's Present Play Skits

Wednesday morning the Seniors presented skits of their super-colossal production, "The Whole Town's Talking." The play promises to be the talk of the town. Comments heard after the skits seem to be very favorable and point in the direction that the Seniors will have a good crowd.

Short scenes from various portions of the play were presented, characters were introduced, and a short speech by the "taxi driver" was given.

The play will be presented Thursday afternoon at a 10c matinee for children and on Friday evening at 8:15 for everyone.

Fourth Grade Wins

The fourth grade has won in the recent contest staged against the fifth grade. The average for the two grades were:

Fourth grade 90 2-3 and the fifth grade average was 89 8-9 per cent, both for one month.

Much excitement prevailed and the fourth grade won by a nose! JB

GUIDANCE COLUMN

Art Museum Assistant

In this vocation, enjoyment of beauty and the gratification of a desire to teach and to foster appreciation of the fine arts may be found in work which is interesting as well as serviceable to the public.

A college training with art as the major study is a necessary qualification for this vocation; and secretarial training, general culture, ability to speak in public, and a knowledge of foreign languages are of great assistance in doing the work it imposes.

Since the task of the museum assistant is to serve others, the work requires in those who perform it, an interest in people, poise, patience, and an agreeable manner. A well-trained voice is essential as is a retentive memory; it is necessary to be systematic in planning and arranging work and constantly eager to acquire wider knowledge in the special field in which the worker is engaged. A person who is unsystematic or who rebels against routine and tradition will not be successful in this vocation.

Furniture Designer

During the last ten or twelve years, there has been a steadily growing demand for furniture of the "modern" type, especially in offices and places of business. It is well to remember, however, that any new trend of decoration will never wholly supplant the demand for period types. Queen Anne, Georgian and Directoire are styles that are ageless.

One who is interested in furniture designing to be fully equipped for this vocation, must have a thorough understanding of the history of furniture and a knowledge of the internal forces which bring about changes of style and taste. Along with this, must go much training in drawing and pure design, and the knack of keeping within a certain production cost. Students desiring to become furniture designers usually find it possible after their school training to apprentice for a few months in the summer with some good firm. There is a real future in furniture designing if you have the right qualifications.

Artiat

The training of an "artist" used in the broadest sense of the word, is of endless duration. The real problem facing a student who has made up her mind to become an artist (disregarding the obvious necessity for talent) is a financial one, and because of this, if she tries to specialize too soon, she errs for two reasons: First, she must have a sound background in cultural study and much training. Second, she may have to do much commercial work in varied fields to provide herself with sufficient money to carry on in her chosen field. She must not suppose that genius will make up for a lack of business-like qualities necessary for success in any profession. JB

Friends were present from Attica, Waverly, Wellsville, Andover, Rexville, Buffalo, Independence and Raymond, Pa.

A waxed surface that has been scratched or spotted may usually be restored by washing it with turpentine and then rewaxing it.

Moss and weeds in lawns indicate low fertility and do not necessarily indicate a sour or acid soil.

P. A. System Used By Senior Cast

The Public Address system was used as a source of advertising Monday afternoon. These members from the cast of the approaching Senior Play, "The Whole Town's Talking" were introduced by Lucille Joyce. The three of the cast told a little bit about the play, which we gathered is going to be super-colossal. They were Ken Gath as Henry Simmons, Roland Shaff as Chester Binney and Eleanor Northrup as Lila Wilson. They urged the students to be at "The Whole Town's Talking" Friday evening. Other members of the class spoke at various times throughout the week.
