TO THE EDITOR:

At the beginning of this last year, everyone was as enthused with the idea of "early rising" as with any other novel idea; however at the close of summer more than a few found it distinctly boring.

a few found it distinctly boring.

I think that Daylight Saving Time thould be put on a nation-wide basis or clse it should be dropped completely. In Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public's home, the alarm clock rings at 7 and wearily the adult Publics drag out of bed. Off goes Mr. John Public to work. At 9 the little Publics fare get up and immediately Sue yells she'll' be late for school until mother explains that the clock is an hour fast. Junior, trying to be helpful sets the clock back. At 11 Mr. John Public arrives for dinner and at 12 Mrs. John Public "warms up" the meal for the young generation. Conflict is everywhere. Poor family; almost as bad as the Bumsteads.

In the city, daylight saving time may be all right if one will condescend to rise and retire by the same decend to rise and retire by the same facend to rise facend to rise facend to rise facend to I think that Daylight Saving Time that one hour of last sleep seem so precious.

Generally, I view daylight saving time as an entire waste of time, energy, and planning. Most of us rise early enough as it is anyway!

Your "against" editorial is all about the farmer's end of it. Well, I wouldn't know about that 'cause my father's work is in the "city."

And I can certainly tell you that he enjoys that hour puttering around in the back yard, in the garden or just smoking before the sun goes down. Your idea that a farmer must work an hour longer is all wrong, because, if he does do that, it is his fault since he is his own boss and privileged to quit when he wants to. Days one hour longer are certainly all right with me because it means one more hour in which to be busy- It takes no extra energy from the content of the content Days one hour longer are certainy all right with me because it means one more hour in which to be busy. It takes no extra energy from me planning for meals, and dates is still easy and time still goes on forever. Have daylight time—like it?

NO HITS-NO RUNS

Andover Central is about to en Andover Central is about to enter a new sports season today—the baseball season. Everyone knows that our basketball is or at least, it has always seemed to be, the biggest sport here in Andover. Why that is true, no one seems to know, because certainly baseball is as lively and entertaining as basketball and there is enough talk around the drug there is enough talk around the drug there and school to make anyone interested in it. However, the fact is still before us that our baseball teams do not get the support they should. We realize that attending still before us that our baseball teams do not get the support they should. We realize that attending out-of-town games is hard for that is no excuse for staying away from home ames. A good student and townspeople audience might be just the thing that would help us to bring feeth a winning baseball team and a trophy for our trophy case in the school halt.

"BASE HITS" By RYAN

The Purple and White will open their baseball season this Thursday playing Scio on the local diamond. The locals will be out for revenge The locals will be out for revenge as Scio won both games last year.

"Swig" Lehman and Don Lynch will be the starting battery for Andover. "Wig" is a veteran pitcher, having won many games for the Panthers and every one hopes he continues his good work. Don is an able catcher and will be in there fighting every minute.

The infeld locks a lot better now.

The Seniors had a gay old time as usual at their class party last night. Yellowing forward to another as soon as they can work it into their heavy schedule.

Don't forget the "Vic" dance to morrow (Friday) night. Townspeoa ple will be welcome, and a big representation from the student body is expected. Stags will be allowed. Only 10c for a whole evening of dancing to your favorite orchestras.

Miss Larkin was lucky enough to be able to spend a few days of her vacation in New York, seeing some of the current plays.
