mental over you" in your "Alice blue gown" while we're "walking by the river" with "lilacs in the rain" and in the "deep purple" "stardust" there'll be "two cigarettes in the dark."

"Say when" "pretty baby," we'll make "the same old story." "I'll never smile again" until "you and your kiss" make up "my home sweet home." Don't be "careless" because "I've got my eyes on you" "until tomorrow" when "I'll look for yesterday"—"thanks for the memory" and "keep on eye on your heart" because "I can't love you any more."

Some Smiles . . .

George G.: "Did I ever tell you the story about the airplane?"
Rolly: "No, what about it?"
George: "Aw, never mind. It's way over your head."

Marilyn: "Gee, Eleanor, you've got mis-mated socks on today. A red one and blue one."
Eleanor: "Yeah. I know. It's a funny thing, too. I've got another pair home just like 'em."

Mr. Lynch: "What was the reason for the era of time known as the Dark Ages?"
George K.: "Must have been because there were so many knights then."

Ken: "I've got to make someoney fast. Got any ideas?"
Rolly: "Sure, put some glue on it and drop it on the floor."

Mr. Lynch: "What ruler do you think has the most influence over its people?"
Miles G.: "The ruler you've got in your hand."
