Light From Man's Face

Turned Into Electricity

One form of electron tube does for the eye what the telephone does for the ear. That phototube, as it is called, can take the light reflected from a man's face, change it into a current of electricity, send the current over a wire or through space, and change it back again into an image of a face.

Suppose the image were that of a germ, and that it were magnified millions of times. Wouldn't that give us the most powerful of microscopes? Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin, the scientist who gave us television as we know it today, thinks so, and has built an experimental instrument which, when it is perfected, will enable science to penetrate still more deeply into the unknown of the infinitely small.

The potentialities of such an invention surpass prediction. For example, there are about 20 diseases caused by viruses—among them infantile paralysis, smallpox, chickenpox, the common cold, typhus, rabies, measles, mumps and encephalitis (the so-called sleeping sickness). What are these viruses? Nobody knows. If they are germs that lie beyond the microscope, as some believe, the electron microscope should reveal them.

When the electron microscope is perfected—a matter of 10 years or so—prepare yourself for another Pasteur. In some university laboratory, in some hospital, he may be already at work, a youngster of 25, doing the best that he can with such magnifying lenses as the most skillful experts can produce. What a bound medicine will make when he studies the ultramicroscopic with electron tubes!

Conflicts between parents and their children are an inevitable product of the rapid changes through which civilization is now passing, says Dr. Kingsley Davis, associate professor of sociology at the Pennsylvania State college.

"In primitive society, there is little or no change of standards from one generation to another," he pointed out by way of contrast. "Hence there is rarely any parent-youth conflict."

One of the biggest sources of family conflict today is that youth is just gaining full powers at a time of technological change while parents are losing theirs and need security, said Dr. Davis. "Most societies assign different and complementary duties to each. Among us, however, there is inter-age competition since most positions are theoretically based on accomplishment rather than age. Arrogance and frustration appear in the young; fear and envy in the old."

In a general way, he added, larger families have a better chance of escaping conflict than small families, whose attachments are closer.

Fireproof Cotton
Fireproof cotton—that is what the department of agriculture promises, after experimenting with a burning match and an acetylene torch on a pile of cotton.

The burning match left a smudge but didn't burn the cotton and the torch burnt a hole through the cotton, but the cotton around the hole didn't even smudge.

W. J. Heenan, an inspector of the department, declared after the experiment in Charlotte, N. C., that in his opinion it was the greatest thing that has happened to the cotton industry.

He pointed out that the possibilities of fireproof cotton was unlimited. He said that the government has allotted 500,000 pounds of this cotton to a Charlotte manufacturing company.

Silence Is Life
Silence is not only golden, but is life itself to certain types of cicadas, or locusts, according to an article in the American Museum's magazine, Natural History, which describes the technique of the cicada-killer's annual "blitzkrieg" which begins in June.

This cicada-killer, a type of wasp, locates her prey by their singing, which is an unfortunate talent possessed only by the male cicada. Having located her prey, the wasp does not kill, but only paralyzes her victim by an injection of poison. The living but helpless cicada is then flown by the wasp to her underground brood chamber, and stored away as a future food supply for her young.

Cards for Room Numbers
The manager of the new Government Railway Tourist hotel at El Portillo in the Andes, not far from the city of Valparaiso, found himself with exactly 53 rooms for guests. Instead of numbering these rooms from 1 to 53, he has had an artist paint a large playing card on each door.

The manager claims that guests sometimes forget whether they belong in room 23 or 32, but nobody could possibly, even in the dark, mix up the three of hearts with the deuce of clubs. The rooms designated by the queens of all four suits are reserved for ladies, while the joker is found on the door of a large room used only when they have a full house. This large room is fitted with 16 bunks.

FRUIT, FLOWERS AND GARDEN

USING GARDEN SPACE

C. B. Raymond

Late June and early July are busy and important times in the home vegetable garden. In addition to harvesting some crops, this is the time for second planting of such crops as green and wax snap beans that will do well thru the hot summer months. Plantings of sweet corn for late harvest should also be made.

Land on which peas and other early vegetables have been harvested should be worked and sown to other vegetables rather than left to grow weeds the rest of the year. If the space is not needed immediately, it may be worked and kept in shape for sowing Chinese cabbage about the middle of July, or for growing fall spinach, lettuce, beets, or turnips. Another application of fertilizer should be worked in for these crops.

The use of straw, grass, weeds or any other type of mulch under tomato plants will keep the oncoming fruits clean, help to control weeds, and save moisture. Perhaps some fertilizer is needed in the garden, and late June or early July is a good time to apply it in bands, a few inches to each side of the row of vegetables.

The harvest season for asparagus ends about the last of June when other vegetables become plentiful, but this does not mean the asparagus bed should be neglected. Keep it free from weeds and allow the top growth to develop in the asparagus.

Edwards: "Do you know at what age a baby begins to think?"
Benner: "Certainly. Mine began to think that I ought to walk the floor with him the first week he arrived in the house."

To facilitate and speed parts of the lend-lease program that affect agriculture, a joint Anglo-American food committee has been formed.

Defensive Tactics
The Accused: "There's the lawyer we stuck up. It's all up with us. He's going to testify against us."
His Accomplice: "Not this time, he won't. I've hired him to defend us."

So That's Why?
Teacher: "Why does the cream rise to the top of the milk?"
Johnny: "So the people can get it."
