Checking of Farms Started in Allegany County

Eight farm checkers have completed their training and have started to check performance under the 1941 Agricultural Conservation Program, according to H. L. Hodnett, chairman of the county committee.

Already 1,923 farms in the county are enrolled in the program, and all of these farms are to be checked by December 1st. "All practices under the 1941 program must be completed by September 1st," states Mr. Hodnett, and this means that all lime and superphosphate obtained thru the 1941 program should be used before September 1st.

A new feature of the farm checking this fall will be the locating on aerial photographs of all farms of the county, even if they are not enrolled in the program. Mr. Hodnett urges that full co-operation be given to the farm checkers in order that the cost of this work can be kept at a minimum.

Uncle Ab says we would be more likely to correct our own faults if others didn't try to correct them for us.

Louisa's Letter

LETTERS ANSWERED

Dear Louisa:
My father never did anything for us children but to make our home a nightmare. Finally, our mother, who could stand his abuse and neglect no longer, took us away and altho we had a hard time we did live in decency and all of us married very nice men. Just recently our father has found out where we are. He is a helpless, dissipated old sot and has nowhere to go. He wants us to take him in. Now, Louisa, none of us feel the slightest affection for him as he killed all that when we were little children. Do you think it is our duty to take him in our homes where he will be a discordant note and the cause of much unhappiness?
PUZZLED—California.

Answer
—As far as duty is concerned, I don't think you owe your father one iota of consideration. Under the circumstances and feeling as you do I should certainly not take him into my home. However, no one likes to know that their own flesh and blood is suffering for the want of food and warmth, and I feel sure that pride will make you and your sisters see that he has some place to stay, altho, mind you, I don't say that he deserves it.

Why don't all of you go in together and pay his board at some old people's home or in some private home in another town. He would then not be in your way or on your conscience.

Dear Louisa:
I am always reading about how wild the young people are and how late they stay out at nights and how worried their parents are, but how about the children who stay home and the parents who are out all of the time?

When I get home from school mother is generally at a bridge party or a club meeting and after supper she and daddy will leave us to study while they go to the movies or to see some of the neighbors. I haven't had a talk with one of them in years.

As Andy, or is it Amos, says "dere you is." And what Lois says is absolutely true about a great number of families. The parents make no effort to get close to their children or to have common interests with them, and the reason is that they are selfishly bent on their own pleasure.

Now, I certainly do not advocate giving up everything to one's children, but I do think they should have a share of their parents' time. Do not leave them every evening and

LITTLE BITS OF HUMOR

He Knew
Youthful Bridegroom: "My wife has come into my life like a ray of sunshine."
Cynical Benedict: "Give her time and she'll go thru your pockets like a streak of lightning."

Highbrow Boner
Speaking of grammatical errors, or to satisfy the purists, errors in grammar, Lord Morley once said: "Neither you nor I am entirely ourselves." His solecism was picked up by Punch who inquired: "Then who else am we?"

Where Creditors Are Not
"I like to take a jaunt in the country," remarked a city man, who is up to his neck in debt. "I love to stroll along past quiet country pastures. You know you just can't owe money to a cow."

Fleeting Honors
Asylum Patient (to new appointee): "Who are you?"
Appointee: "I am the new superintendent."
Patient: "Oh, it won't take long to knock that out of you. I was Napoleon when I came here."
