Louisa's Letter

Dear Louisa:

Last spring I met a young man whom I liked very much. He asked me for a date and on a good many occasions since, when he has come to my home town we have had dates. I've fallen very much in love with him and I thought he liked me a lot. But—and this is the distressing part—a girl who is visiting here says that he is a married man and that she knows his wife well. Don't you think that he and his wife would not love each other, or why would he be going with other girls? I don't know whether to believe her or not or what to do if I find out what she says is true. Please advise me.

SUNE M.—Del.

Answer:

The next time the young man comes to call, tell him what the girl has said, and if it is true, I am sure he will not deny it. He will probably say that you never asked him about being married, and he just never mentioned it.

From what you write, I gather that his business is one that calls for travel and he is probably one of those men who like to pass the time away with mild flirtations. He probably loves his wife very much and doesn't realize how shabbily he is treating her, not to mention what kind of a deal you are getting.

It is unfortunate that he has been so unfair, as you would hardly have let yourself care for him if you had known he was married when you first met.

However, it is a fine thing that you have found out about him before too late. If he is really married, put him out of your life at once. Go with other young men and forget him as soon as possible. Just mark it up to experience.—LOUISA

Dear Louisa:

I have a neighbor who sends her small son over to my house whenever she wishes to go out for the afternoon. I feel responsible for him and I play the role of nursemaid about half of the time.

What must I do? In other respects I like her very much.

A.L.P.—Md.

Answer:

The next time she sends him over call her immediately and say you are sorry but as you are going out yourself you will have to send him home. Or you can say that you are planning to take a nap, etc., and he will have to come back another day when it doesn't interfere with your plans.

I presume that you have a child of your own, so a better plan might be to talk to her and say that as neither of you have a nurse it might be a good arrangement for each of you to care for the other's child once or twice a week. In that way, both of you would have an opportunity for several free afternoons and neither of you would be the "goat."

You are foolish to let her impose on you.

LOUISA.

DISH FOR THIS WEEK

Tomato rarebit served with poached eggs is tasty, colorful, quickly prepared, reasonable in cost, and high in food value. When it is served on wholewheat toast or toast made from enriched bread, with plenty of milk and fresh fruit for dessert, it makes a complete lunch or supper.

The following recipe is from the New York State College of Home Economics:

Tomato Rarebit with Poached Eggs
1 pint of tomatoes, fresh or canned.

- Seasonings:
Small pieces of celery.
Slice of onion.
2 or 3 cloves.
Small pieces of bay leaf.
Salt and pepper.
2 tablespoons of flour.
2 tablespoons of butter.
1/4 cup of grated sharp cheese.
Eggs.
Toast.
Minced parsley if desired.

Cook the tomatoes with the seasonings for about ten minutes and then rub them thru a sieve. Blend the flour with the butter and add it to the strained tomatoes. Cook until the mixture is thick. Add the grated cheese, blend and pour the mixture over slices of toast. Place a poached egg on the top of each slice and sprinkle it with fine-minced parsley if desired. Serve it at once.

Lunch or Supper Menu: Tomato rarebit with poached eggs on wholewheat toast; crisp carrot and cucumber sticks, milk, sliced peaches and cream, and oatmeal cookies.
