Farm Machinery Program Planned

Farm machinery dealers, vocational-agriculture teachers, and members of the County Agricultural Defense Committee met in Belmont recently to make plans for an intensive farm machinery repair program in Allegany county. This program will be carried on the extension service and the Allegany county Farm Bureau.
Plans call for six three-day clinics to be held around the county under the direction of an agricultural engineer who will help a farmer repair a piece of machinery brought to the clinic. Clinics will be held in Andover, Seio, Friendship, Fillmore, Angelica and Canaseraga.
The purposes of the clinic are to provide a warm, well lighted room and to have tools and technical help available to assist farmers in the repair of their common machines.
Soon after April 1st, several one-day tractor tune-up meetings will be held around the county, and these will be followed by field demonstration meetings on machinery adjustment, according to the announcement by Mr. Kredler. Local chairmen in charge of arrangements are William Joyce, Andover; Willard Young, Seio; Raymond Strahan, Friendship; William Hodnett, Fillmore; C. R. Mapes, Birdsall and Bonner, Shay, Canaseraga.

Louisa's Letter

Dear Louisa:
My daughter who is only 17 years old ran away and was married to a boy not much older than she is.
Her father and I told her never to darken our door again but I wonder if we are not punishing ourselves as much as we are her. The boy is not bad but they were both too young to get married and he hasn't a very good job.
I worry a lot about her. I don't know whether to back down on my word or not. "Worried Mother"

Answer
"Wise men change their minds, fools never," is as good today as it ever was. Wouldn't it be a terrible world if we had to carry out, to the letter, all the statements we made when we were angry or terribly upset?
To begin with, why should any parent, whose child makes a mistake, think that because of this mistake, the parent must make it harder for her to make the best of it?
Let us admit that your daughter was too young to get married, that it would have been better for her to finish school and then by that time the young man would have been better able to support her or she might have been prepared to help support a home.

All of this is probably true. Your idea in wanting her to wait was because you thought she would be happier if she did wait, wasn't it? In other words, your primary concern was the happiness of your child and not just a display of your authority.
Well, she didn't wait and altho her chances of happiness are less as a result of her choice, still they are not completely destroyed. Perhaps she and her young man will make a go of it yet. And you and her father can help them. Holding malice in your heart is childish and out of date. Forgive your daughter and do what you can to make her marriage a successful one. A helping hand now and a mother to turn to for advice may mean the difference between a happy marriage and a disillusioned divorced woman later on. If you really have your child's best interest at heart you are taking a very poor way of showing it by ordering her to keep away from your home. LOUISA.

Dear Louisa:
I am a grandmother, but my daughter-in-law evidently considers me a nurse maid.
Several afternoons ago I was ready to go out and spend a few hours away from home when my two small grandchildren came in to see me. They said they had come to spend the afternoon, so I had to take off my hat and stay at home because I didn't want the youngsters to think I wasn't glad to see them. Later on I learned that their mother had gone to a party.
What would you do under the circumstances? Grandmother.

Answer
It would have been the least your daughter-in-law could have done to find out if it suited you to keep the children before she just sent them over.
If I were in your place, I wouldn't hesitate to tell her that she must find out whether it was convenient for you to keep them or not before she went off and left them. If she paid no attention to you and sent them again when you had planned to go out, I should take them wherever she was and tell her that, while I should love to have them, I had planned to be away for the afternoon and they would have to come back for another visit when I was going to be at home.
Be nice and pleasant about it, for you don't want to cause hard feelings.

"My daughter is going to play Beethoven tonight."
"I 'ope she wins."

Hinglish 'Umor
"What a big family you have, Mrs. Jones," said the visitor.
"Yes'm. And the funny thing is that all the names begin with a haitch. There's 'Orance, 'Erbert, 'Enery, 'Uhg, 'Uberr, 'Arold, 'Arriet and 'Etty—all except the last one, and we 'ad 'er named Halice."

Helping Out
"Whatcha doing today?" said Mrs. A. to Mrs. B. during the course of a social telephone call.
"I'm washing the baby clothes," said Mrs. B. And right there the operator cut in and said: "I'm ringing 'em."

"Thankful! What have I to be thankful for? I can't pay my bills."
"Then, man, be thankful that you aren't one of your creditors."

ings in your family and I am sure you don't want your grandchildren to feel unwelcome at grandmother's house.
