of the replies could be included in one or the other of the following reasons:

(1) For its medicinal or food value. In years past, when doctors and medicines were not as available as they are today, the use of alcohol for medicinal purposes was often recommended. However, physicians who keep up with the latest scientific discoveries no longer prescribe alcohol, for it has been replaced by more effective and less dangerous medicines. Dr. Charles Mayo, of the famous Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., declared: "Medicine has reached a period when alcohol is rarely employed as a drug, being displaced by better medicines."

Beer has often been advertised as possessing great food values. While it is true that beer does possess calories, or heat units, beer contains no vitamins. A pint of beer contains 337 calories while a pint of milk which has 397 calories, also has vitamins A, B, C and D. In three and one-half pints of milk one gets as much protein as he gets in 70 pints of beer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

WHY SOME PEOPLE DRINK BEVERAGE ALCOHOL

International Sunday School Lesson for March 8, 1942

Golden Text: "Wine is a mocker—And whosoever erred thereby is not wise."—Proverbs 20:1.

Lesson Text: Gen. 43:34; Psalm 104:14, 15; Prov. 31:5-7; Eccl. 2:1-3, 10, 11; Isa. 56:12; 1 Cor. 10:6-7.

Whether we as a nation want to admit it or not, the problem of beverage alcohol is growing more serious every day. Statistics prove that the use of alcoholic beverages is becoming more widespread. Government sales records prove this fact; government crime records also prove this statement and hospital reports verify the truth of this assertion.

Therefore, it is important that thinking people discuss the question posed for our lesson this week:—"Why do some people drink beverage alcohol?" We do thank God that we can put that "some" in the question, because there are numbers of people in this country who refuse to have anything to do with this evil.

If a group of people who drink alcoholic beverages were asked the question, "Why do you drink beer, wine or whiskey," as the case may be, you would receive a number of different answers, but the sum total

While users often state that they like the "pick-up" alcoholic beverages give, the fact is that alcohol does not stimulate; it depresses. Alcohol does not make one's mind more active. Dr. Haven Emerson, professor of public health administration at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University says that alcohol results in "inferiority of both physical and mental performances."

(3) As a means of escape. This is a faulty argument for the use of alcoholic beverages because anyone who has tried this "means of escape" if truthful, would be forced to admit that taking a drink has never removed the unpleasant condition from which he was trying to "escape." Only the coward resorts to drink to escape the unhappy situations in life.

(4) As a means of popularity. This, perhaps, is where most drinking begins. Some people do not have the moral fortitude to be different from the crowd. Modern society, to its own disgrace, practically forces those who crave popularity, to indulge in cocktails and other drinking. In order to prove themselves "good sports" or "one of the crowd," many people, especially the young people, take the drink which may ultimately lead to a drunkard's grave.

Abraham Lincoln once said: "Liquor might have defenders, but no defense. Whether or not the world would be vastly benefited by a total and final banishment from it of all intoxicating drinks, seems to me not an open question."

Robert Louis Stevenson declared: "I have always thought drunkenness a wild and almost fearful pleasure rather than a human pleasure."

Nile Kinnick, the Iowa halfback who, in 1939, won the Heisman Memorial, the Camp, the Maxwell and the Chicago Tribune trophies and who was selected by the Associated Press poll as the year's best football player, says: "I am a teetotaler, and am in no way in sympathy with the use of alcoholic beverages."

David Abbot Jenkins, automobile speed king, says: "Some people think it is embarrassing to pass up drinks at banquets and parties. But my work and contacts have taken me to several occasions where intoxicants have been served, and never once have I felt out of place in passing along my glass. In fact, most people seem to respect a fellow for sticking to his guns."

A varnished surface which has turned white from water or hot dishes may be restored by rubbing it lightly with a piece of flannel dampened with spirits of camphor or peppermint, followed after a few minutes by an application of furniture polish. A drop or two of ammonia on a damp cloth may also be used in place of the camphor or peppermint.
